

GV 1471

.B3

Copy 1

PARLOR AMUSEMENTS

G. B. BARTLETT

Class GV1471

Book B3

Copyright N^o _____

COPYRIGHT DEPOSIT.

THE LIFE OF SAMUEL JOHNSON

BY JAMES BOSWELL

IN TWO VOLUMES.

LONDON: Printed by A. MILLAR, in Pall-mall.

MDCCLXXVI.

Vol. I.

Part I.

Page 1.

1769.

1770.

1771.

1772.

1773.

1774.

1775.

1776.

1777.

1778.

1779.

1780.

PARLOR AMUSEMENTS

FOR THE YOUNG FOLKS,

CONTAINING

TABLEAUX, PANTOMIMES, SOCIAL AMUSEMENTS, JARLEY'S WAX
WORKS, DECLAMATIONS, PRIVATE THEATRICALS, ETC., ETC., WITH FULL DIRECTIONS FOR PRO-DUCING THEM.

BY

G. B. BARTLETT.

NEW EDITION, WITH ADDITIONS.

New York:

HAPPY HOURS COMPANY,

No. 1 CHAMBERS STREET.

Copy 2

GV 1471
B3

Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1874, by

JAMES R. OSGOOD & CO.,

In the Office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington.

Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1876, by

HAPPY HOURS COMPANY,

In the Office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington.

11. T. 11. ap. 11

PREFACE.

THE dramatic element exists, in a greater or less degree, in every mind; for the little child begins to imagine or personate some character at a very early age. The doll is invested with histrionic power, and plays many different rôles as time goes on; and the love of acting lasts after old age has dulled many other enjoyments. No pleasanter manner of whiling away a long evening can be found than by a simple entertainment in which old and young unite. The chief objection to such performances has been the trouble which attends their preparation. This little book is intended to obviate this difficulty, as the scenes are so arranged that the most of them can be performed in any parlor with simple properties and costumes, and most of them without study or practice. Every one of them, however, has been tried before large audiences in hundreds of cities, and they are now simplified and arranged for performance by old and young.

In the opening chapter, proof of the long experience of the manager is given; and the last ones are devoted to games of thought, in which new games, and old ones in a new dress, are presented in the hope that much benefit to the thinking powers may be gained, as well as amusement.

ARTICLE

OF THE CONSTITUTION
OF THE
UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
IN EVIDENCE OF
THE FIDELITY
AND COURAGE
OF
THE JUDICIAL BRANCH
OF
THE GOVERNMENT
IN
THE PERFORMANCE
OF THEIR DUTY
IN
THE CASE OF
THE REPUBLICAN PARTY
IN
THE YEAR
1857
BY JAMES
M. SMITH
OF
THE BAR
AT
NEW-YORK
1857

CONTENTS.

	PAGE.
INTRODUCTION	7
HINTS ON TABLEAUX.....	17
SCENES IN THE LIFE OF MARIE STUART.....	23
ELABORATE TABLEAUX.....	25
THE LILY MAID OF ASTOLAT.....	29
JARLEY WAX-WORKS.....	30
THE BABES IN THE WOODS.....	35
THE MAGIC MIRROR.....	37
THE MISER'S SUPPER.....	41
LOVE IN AMBUSH	44
THE SLEEPING BEAUTY.....	46
AULD ROBIN GRAY	50
THE MISTLETOE BOUGH	53
VILLIKENS AND HIS DENIAH.....	57
CHARADES	61
GAMES OF THOUGHT.....	67
THE MENTAL INDEX	70
DECLAMATION	72
SOCIAL AMUSEMENTS.....	80
PRIVATE THEATRICALS.....	88
LIST OF PLAYS.....	89

INTRODUCTION.

As I stood on the stage of the new opera-house, all ready to begin, an irresistible desire to laugh nearly upset my gravity, caused by the funny contrast between the entertainment I was about to superintend and my first dramatic performance.

The house is crowded with the beauty and fashion of the city; and the receipts, for the benefit of a noble charity, will exceed a thousand dollars. The stage is furnished with every appliance which modern art has brought to the aid of the drama. By a touch of the bell, the orchestra can be set in motion, or stopped in the middle of the sweetest strain. By a turn of the hand, the scene can be plunged into utter darkness, or lighted with the brilliancy of daylight; which will flash into red sunrise, or fade into green moonlight, at will. At the sound of a whistle, angels will float from the flies, or demons spring through the floor. Quiet carpenters consult the plot, and the horizon melts into forest, and the palace at once becomes a kitchen. In the luxurious dressing-rooms, ladies and gentlemen of talent stand ready to lend the graces of refined culture to the attractions of the scene. At the rise of the curtain, a large ship, ornamented with quaint carving, bears a graceful company of beautiful blondes. Groups of classic statuary, and careful copies of pictures, succeed; and then a comedy is acted by amateurs, to whom the movements of our best society are natural, and not assumed. The last scene represents a dark wood by moonlight, where Bohemian gypsies in rich costume glide about among the trees, and finally join the brilliant dance to the sound of ringing tambourines and clashing cymbals.

What a contrast to the old garret in Concord, which witnessed our earliest dramatic efforts!

An old blue bedquilt, hung on a clothes-line from the rude rafters, furnished our only stage adornment. Neptune, a great Newfoundland dog, was the only member of the corps who could stand erect at the wings; from which he used to rush upon the stage at the dénoûment, and create considerable confusion by biting the ears of the dead heroes. The third member of the company was a boy aged six, who is now a prominent merchant. We played Shakspearian tragedies chiefly, and took turns in personating Clifford and Rutland, as the killing parts were considered the most desirable. Aunt Betsey, a dear old lady, composed our whole audience, and showed a high appreciation of the performance by laughing heartily at the most tragic scenes. Many strange events transpired between these two occasions, some of which I propose to relate in the order of their occurrence.

After a year or two, the dramatic company, being increased by the addition of a dozen schoolboys, was removed from the garret to more commodious quarters in a large hen-house; where large audiences of twenty persons crowded the auditorium on Saturday afternoon. Miss Edgeworth's drama of "Old Poz" was here produced with great effect; the part of the magpie being taken by a large parrot, who lent a tragic element to the piece by biting savagely at every one who came near his cage. "The Lady of the Lake" also had a most successful run, until the dying Highlander brought down the house by rolling over upon the back curtain, thus exposing the dressing-room, and the bare walls of the old henhouse. A pair of old cavalry swords were the favorite properties, as they served also as goads in driving home the cows from their distant pasture. One of the boys, who delighted to march along the country lanes with martial tread, cutting off the heads of the mulleins, served gallantly in every battle of the Potomac, and fought his way to a major-generalship.

This temple of the drama was burned, like many another theatre; and the company took refuge in the Town Hall, where many ladies and gentlemen now well known in literature made their début. The gifted authoress of "Little Women" here enacted her favorite characters. One of our leading men is now editor of a leading paper; and one has made a mark with his pen on both sides of the Atlantic. These performances being often attended by persons from Boston and Cambridge, their fame spread so widely that members of the company made tours to distant places to assist in similar enterprises. Sometimes fine scenery was painted or hired; but in many cases the accessories were so simple that the talent was made more conspicuous.

One of the best of these was given in the kitchen of an old farmhouse, almost the only inhabited building on an island in the sea. The time was midnight; one of the actresses a well-known novelist, and one a lady who had won laurels on the English stage. The play was wholly impromptu. There was no audience at all, the actors being only desirous to secure the applause of each other. The rough beams of the roof were lighted with tallow candles, and garnished with strings of onions and dried pumpkin.

A banquet being called for in the second act, the pantry was robbed of a pan of milk; the comedian foraged the hen-coop; the eggs were beaten by the tragedian; and the effect of the repast was felt by the whole company for a week.

When the sanitary fairs sprung up over all the country, the drama was one of the most successful means employed to raise money. It is impossible to ascertain the amount of these very large sums, as the receipts were added to the general fund, or applied to the purchase of material for village societies, to which the labor of many energetic ladies gave a threefold value. The old academy at North Conway was turned into a summer theatre, and every week the proceeds were forwarded to some hospital. This establishment was as remarkable for the talent of its company as for the simplicity of its decorations. No expense was wasted, as it was solely a money-making concern. One night, a distinguished lady from Boston failed to come on in time when a scene from Dickens was called; and the anxious manager, hurrying into the green-room, found the unfortunate star fastened to the floor, and unable to extricate her foot from a hole in the board through which she had stepped. The guests at this theatre included two major-generals, and a portion of the president's family.

In the city of Louisville, the amateur drama has been brought to the highest state of perfection by the Dickens Club, an organization which has existed for many years, and numbers one hundred members from the age of six to sixty. Old and young act with vigor together; and they have become so perfect, by long practice, that their representations are very clever. They use none of the stage-plays, but dramatize stories and poems to suit their needs.

In an elaborate version of "The Golden Legend," sixty persons appeared in one group in the transformation scene. Six ladies were fastened upon the paint frame, which was covered with light-blue cloth, so that they seemed to be floating in the air. They stood in their stocking-feet, as the illusion would have been destroyed if their black boots had shown against the transparent background. One night the manager stood at the back of the stage, waiting for the cue, at which to give the signal for opening the flats. The avenging angel was strapped upon the frame about six feet from the floor; and, when within two lines of her speech, she whispered in a trembling voice, "I have my boots on!" The lady lifted one foot at a time while he pulled off the boots, and stood holding them in his hand, listening to the denunciation of the ascending angel, as the frame was slowly wound up by the carpenter. Another night, one of the upper angels became so dizzy that she was obliged to be taken down in a hurry, by means of a long ladder, just before the others were exposed to the view of the audience.

A home for widows and orphans received the greater part of its support, for many years, from the efforts of this club.

A whole chapter might be devoted to the romance of the drama, for many a tender scene has been reproduced upon the stage of life. There is one farce in which those who take the lovers' parts are sure to marry. This has proved to be true in so many cases, that it is not considered best to give the name of the play, as the demand would be greater than the publisher could supply.

At some of the army hospitals, the convalescents found amusement for themselves and their friends on the mimic stage. At Annapolis, a large barrack was converted into a theatre, where very creditable performances were given by the soldiers, for several nights, to an audience of about a thousand, nearly every one of whom were cripples. As this array of wounded heroes were drawn up in line, ready to march into the building, one brilliant moonlight night, the sight was very affecting, and made one feel grateful for any amusement which could vary the monotony of their tedious existence. At Washington, a performance was given for the Christian Commission, which was participated in by young ladies from nearly every part of the Union, the wives and daughters of the senators and representatives from the various States. The grace and beauty of two stars of this stage have won laurels in the most brilliant court of Europe.

This taste for the drama exists in the minds of many sedate persons, and often appears most unexpectedly at the summer-resorts, where the cares of business are forgotten, and the hard-working students and merchants delight to renew their youth in some careëss and merry frolic.

Two great merchants once appeared as the Babes in the Wood, dressed in short costumes like boys and girls, while a noted lawyer and preacher represented the robins. Adorned with red shawls and feather-dusters, these frisky birds covered the sleeping innocents with cabbage-leaves.

A dramatic performance was once given above the clouds, on Mount Mansfield, by a party from Cambridge and its vicinity. That night, the excellent hotel was crowded with guests, among whom was the Sage of Concord, the editor of a large journal, two professors, and a prominent lawyer, with ladies from a dozen States. When the sun had set, and the heavy clouds gathered beneath the mountain-top, this motley audience assembled in the long, uncarpeted room, and seated themselves on wooden benches around a bright fire. The performance was of the most primitive character, the wardrobe being selected from the mountain-dresses which hung upon the wall, and the weapons from the kitchen-closet; but the rounds of applause, and shouts of laughter, which shook the rough beams, testified to the delight of the spectators. At the foot of Mount Mansfield, in the town of Stowe, is one of the most beautiful little private theatres in the country. The act-drop and scenery are painted with great nicety; and the machinery is so perfect that the stage can be darkened at once. Among the hundreds of people who visit this popular resort, amateurs of talent are easily found; and difficult comedies are performed in a style which many more pretentious establishments might do well to copy. One little star of this mountain theatre has since figured in the salons of Paris; and many persons, now scattered over the United States, will remember her fascinating personations of difficult rôles. An original comedy was produced here, being a dramatization of Curtis's "Potiphar Papers," arranged by a gentleman from Troy. A young lawyer was summoned by telegraph from Boston to act the part of the fop; and the professor of a New-York university played Cream Cheese in a most oleaginous manner. Seven changes of scenery gave effect to this play, the drawing-room, in the first act, being very handsomely furnished. The audience at this performance came in full dress; and the auditorium was lighted by two large chandeliers with pendants of cut tin, which flashed in quite a magnificent manner.

A laughable occurrence took place during the performance of a farce at this theatre. A young gentleman was playing the part of a lady, dressed in a blonde wig, and a showy silk dress. The lover, being also of a light complexion, wore a dark wig, and had blackened his moustache to match. Regardless of this fact, he imprinted a chaste kiss upon the lips of his beloved, and left a large black circle as the result of his caress. When the summer visitors at the mountains returned to their distant homes, the fame of these performances was so widely scattered that the manager was sent for to many a distant city, to reproduce them for the benefit of charitable purposes throughout the United States. Week after week, performances have been given with generally very good success. The most curious fact gleaned from this long experience is the strange likeness which is found in the various faces, so that pictures can be presented in hundreds of cities in a very similar manner.

The same ideas also re-appear constantly; as, among the properties used, is a large harp, which is carried from place to place, and has never been seen in any collection of people without inspiring some allusion to the "harp of a thousand strings."

The mimic drama also brings out the dispositions of people so strongly that it has been said, "If you wish to know the dispositions of your friend, either marry or unite in a dramatic enterprise with her." It is hoped that this satirical remark can never apply to the actors in these scenes. The chief cause of difficulty is the want of organization; and therefore the first step is, to find some competent manager to assign the parts, and direct the performance. He will soon learn that the only way to govern others is to completely govern himself; and the actors will gain a useful lesson of prompt and cheerful compliance with the decisions of others, which will be of benefit to them on the stage of life. In all of these entertainments, great opportunity is given for the inventive faculties. A little wit is often better than much expense, and the simplest designs are often the most effective; in proof of which I give an account of an entertainment which was hastily prepared on an island where there were but two houses, and no stores. The island lies three miles west of Plymouth Rock, and is owned by a kind and genial gentleman who is admired by so many ladies, that he has always remained single for their sakes.

At the time I speak of, there was a very brilliant company assembled at his house, many of whom are well known to the readers of "Our Young Folks." The blue-eyed Miselle, who has written stories almost as fascinating as herself, the author of the "Seven Little Sisters," and, first and best of all, the mother of "William Henry," all united with many lesser lights to make the summer days pass pleasantly.

One day, as they all sat in the rustic summer-house on the point, watching the sail-boat, on her return trip from Plymouth, laden with passengers and provisions, they beheld a new arrival in the shape of the manager; and, as soon as he had scrambled up the rocky path from the shore, they set him to work at once, under the island law, which provides that each one shall contribute his share for the entertainment of the others. So that afternoon he assembled his forces upon a great rock, and considered the subject. He found plenty of the first two requisites for success,—beauty and brains; one stately brunette for the tragic parts, two lovely blondes for angels and saints, and half a dozen young ladies of the medium style of beauty which abounds in New England. For gentlemen, there were two Harvard students, a gallant young soldier, a grave judge from the West for the heavy father, beside three noble young fishermen for the tableaux. The cast was soon made, and the actors retired to study their parts; when a new difficulty arose. Where can a theatre be found? The kitchen and dining-room are in constant use, and all the other rooms are full to overflowing.

An exploring party then made the circuit of the island, and discovered a large boat-house close to the eastern shore. Here a stage was erected upon four lobster-cages; and a curtain, “borrowed from one of the beds,” was contrived to run upon grummets, or small hoops which are used to confine the sails to the mast of a boat.

For the illustrated ballad, “The Three Fishers” was decided upon, as there were three men ready costumed for the parts, and plenty of nets and lobster-pots for properties. The angels took to themselves wings by making frames from one of those melancholy ruins of modern civilization,—an old hoop-skirt. These frames were covered with cotton cloth, and coated with varnish from the stores of the boat-house. While the varnish was fresh, they were plentifully sprinkled with live-geese feathers; and the effect was truly angelic. "Judith and Holofernes" was one of the tableaux. In the first scene, a black-bearded youth reposed upon two dressing-tables, while his sister flourished the captain's sword above his head. In the second scene, where Judith holds the head, Holofernes knelt between the two tables, and put up his head through a hole in the sheet. To give reality to this scene, it was necessary to have the sheet sprinkled with blood: so the manager demanded some pieces of red flannel to sew upon it. None could be found, however, without robbing the only shirt which was to go on in several of the scenes; so a party set off around the island on a wild search for blood! They soon returned, bringing in triumph some scarlet poppies, the leaves of which served the purpose so well that the dead head was pronounced very lifelike indeed. Next, a wig must be found for the judge to wear as King Lear; and a very wild one was made of the pelt of an old sheep, which produced a very strong effect upon both audience and wearer. The vista for the tableaux was made of dark-gray shawls; but the play was a vaudeville, and demanded a garden-scene. So the rough beams were dressed with graceful vines, and arches made of clematis, lighted up with gleaming sumac, and coral cornel-berries; and, when the shawls were taken down after the tableaux were over, the effect was very fine. Just as the play began, the manager threw open the great doors at the end of the boat-house. The tide was high, and the sea came up close to the building, and the great round August moon began to rise slowly out of the water; and all agreed that no finer background could have been seen in any theatre. So you see that in the mimic stage, as well as on the stage of life, it is well to make the best of your surroundings.

HINTS ON TABLEAUX.

I PROPOSE to give a few plain directions by which effective scenes can be arranged in any room with but little trouble or expense.

You will need ten boxes of various sizes, two half-length picture-frames, one wash tub and board, one broom, twenty feet annealed wire, two dozen curtain-rings, twelve large lamps or twenty candles, or a gas-rod twelve feet long with fifteen five-foot burners upon it, six yards black tarlatan-muslin, costing fifty cents per yard, and five cotton sheets.

If the room has no folding-doors, you must have a thick curtain or bedquilt contrived to draw on a wire across the room at one end, leaving a space about fifteen feet deep for the stage. This space must be draped with shawls or curtains by stretching wire across the sides and back of the stage near the ceiling, and hanging them by means of rings firmly sewed upon the cloth. You will thus have a square room draped all around, except in front. Then procure four upright pieces of narrow board, just the height of the room, for posts; screw them upon the back-sides of the frames near the edge, so that when you raise them up the frames will stand upright four feet and a half from the floor. Cover all the space above and below the frames with cloth of the same color as the back wall, so they will appear to the audience as if they were hanging upon the wall. Put up these frames four feet apart; and nail four strips of board five inches wide, in the shape of a large frame, between them, having the top and bottom strips which form the frame six feet and a half apart; which when completed will give you a large frame between the two smaller ones. This large frame will be four feet wide, and six and a half high, outside. A curtain must be arranged to run in front of the frames in order to cover them when not in use.

These three frames stand at the back of the stage (the supporting-posts nailed to the floor) two feet and a half from the wall, so as to give room for the performers behind them.

If gas is available, fasten a rod, with burners upon it, over the top of the curtain or folding-doors. The best way is to make for it a shelf supported upon two posts about eight feet high. Over the burners, and behind them, tack sheets of common tin, bent so as to throw the light down. If you cannot get the tin conveniently, fasten behind the burners a white sheet, which will serve the purpose very well. If the curtain does not come to the ceiling, you must put a shawl or thick cloth above it, so that the light cannot show much over the curtain into the darkened room where the audience sit. When gas cannot be had, fasten the candles upon the shelf. If kerosene-lamps are used, holes must be made in the board to fasten them firmly in their places. In a very elaborate performance, the stage should be raised to a level with the eyes of the spectators; but I have had many very fine performances in a parlor where we did not begin work until two hours before the curtain rose.

Next make a veil of black tarlatan-muslin large enough to cover the space before the folding-doors or posts which support your curtain.

In the programme I am to give you this month, I shall introduce only such costumes and appointments as can readily be obtained in any house. We will begin with a group of statuary, as this requires more time for preparation than other scenes. Here is a very simple one: "Justice, Mercy, and Peace."

Justice stands on a high pedestal made of two boot-boxes covered with a sheet; Peace on one box; and Mercy kneels on two boxes placed end to end so as to make a long pedestal. They are draped in sheets. Peace must be taken by a child dressed in a short frock of white cotton belted around the waist. Justice must be a larger lady than Mercy. Mercy kneels in attitude of prayer, with clasped hands; Justice stands erect, holding a sword and scales covered with white cloth, and having a bandage over her eyes; Peace stands on the right of Justice, holding a stalk of paper lilies in her right hand. The faces must be whitened with lily-white rubbed on dry.

In all statues, the hands which are shown are covered with white cotton gloves, the arms with stocking-legs sewed to the gloves, and the heads with wigs made of lamp-wicking. Remember to turn down your gas, or to draw a strip of green cambric before your kerosene-lamps; and, if your statues stand still, the effect is wonderful. When the audience have seen enough of the statues, lower your curtain, or shut folding-doors. The assistants rapidly clear the stage, draw away the curtain which hides the picture, and in one minute the audience behold, to their astonishment, a set of tableaux; in one frame, "Milton at the Age of Ten," by a girl with a round face, and light, wavy hair falling upon her shoulders in front, flat-top cap, pointed paper collar, velvet basque; in the other, "The Pride of the Market," a dark-haired young lady, rustic hat, white waist, bodice cut out of red flannel; she holds on her left arm a basket of apples, and in her right hand the largest apple of all. In the centre or large frame we will have "Lear and Cordelia. Lear sits proudly on a soap-box, Cordelia has her left arm over his shoulder. Throw light from the left side with a common reflector. Turn the light on at top, and the pictures look as if they were painted.

Next we must have a comic scene, "Love's Disguises."

A pretty girl in calico is washing at a tub at the right side of the stage; a fop is looking at her through an enormous eye-glass; he is dressed showily, with white hat and cane. In the next scene, the maiden is sitting on a chair in the centre, and a cunning little Cupid aims his great tin bow at the fop from the wash-tub.

In the mean time, the active assistant has filled the frames again; and without delay the audience behold "Catawba," "Little Nell and her Grandfather," and "Little Bo-Peep."

Catawba holds a glass half full of vinegar; light flowing hair, white dress, with grape-leaves. Bo-Peep, high sugar-loaf hat made of red paper, calico dress tucked over red petticoat; holds a crooked cane. Nell, calico dress, broad hat. Grandfather leans on her shoulder, cane in right hand.

And then "The Roman Girls at the Shrine of St. Agnes."

The saint, in white, stands in the large frame; before her on the stage two boxes covered with a sheet form the shrine, on which stands a cross, made of unpainted wood, two feet and a half high. One dark Roman girl holds a wreath of flowers over one arm of the cross; another kneels at the other side, passing to her a basket of flowers; a third kneels in prayer at front of stage, telling her beads; a fourth stands in the corner of the stage at back, holding a sheaf of straw. Dress,—black, brown, or red skirts; black bretelles over white waists; long white towels on heads, folded three times the longest way, and placed flat upon the head leaving the rest to hang down behind. Concealed singers sing "Ave Sanctissima."

By this time, the audience will be ready for something to laugh at: so we will have "Ignorance is Bliss: a French Peasant Scene."

At the left of the stage, an old lady is asleep in a high chair. She is dressed in black, or in any plain dress: wears a white apron, and has a white shawl folded across her shoulders; also a high cap and spectacles, which have fallen upon her nose. At the right, a girl sits at the spinning-wheel. She has on a bright short skirt, white waist, red or black bodice; on her head a cap of lace gathered in a rosette with very long ribbons streaming from it; on her arms she has three ribbons, one at two inches above the wrist, the next below the elbow, the third near the shoulder. A youth is kneeling at her feet, holding her left hand. She looks archly at him, regardless of the unconscious grandmother. The youth has ribbons upon his arms like the girl; he has no coat on, but bright suspenders joined in front with two bars. In the second scene, the lovers remain as before, except that the grandmother has wakened, and is just raising her broom with the intention of waking the young man also. In the third scene, the grandmother holds the lovers apart at arm's-length by grasping one ear of each. The girl is crying at the left side, and the youth at the right of grandmother looks sheepishly down, with his finger in his mouth. Next draw away the back curtain again, and show more pictures which the assistant has had time enough to prepare.

In the centre frame stands "A Gleaner." In one small frame, a child with a red cape over her head, and a little basket in her hand, personates "Red Riding-hood;" and in the other, "A Marchioness."

Next "The Angels' Whisper." In a cot-bed, two little children are sleeping. One angel lifts the quilt at the right corner of the bed; at the head, another angel, with clasped hands, is smiling upon the sleeping babies; behind the bed, in the centre of the stage, upon a box, stands a third angel with hands extended in blessing; the fourth angel kneels in prayer at the foot of the bed. In the second scene, the little child who lay in front of the bed is kneeling; the highest angel places her left hand upon the child's shoulder, and points up with the right. The other angels turn and look in the same direction. The children are dressed in night-gowns, the angels in white muslin; their wings are made of a wire frame four feet long, in rough imitation of the shape of a bird's wing, and are covered with coarse muslin; the two wings are fastened together by a band of tin five inches long, pierced with holes for the elastic which confines them to the shoulders.

SCENES IN THE LIFE OF MARIE STUART.

SCENE I.

The Rival Queens. Queen Elizabeth dressed in trained silk dress with high ruff, stands R. pointing to Marie Stuart, who holds up her left hand as if deprecating the wrath of her cruel cousin. Marie Stuart wears black dress trimmed with white wax beads, a square head-dress of black. Pictures of these costumes may be found in any history of England.

SCENE II.

Signing the Death-Warrant. Queen Elizabeth sits at the right of a table, which stands in centre of stage, surrounded by her ladies of honor, who are dressed in similar costume to her own. A large man stands behind the table, as if urging her to sign the warrant, which she seems unwilling to do.

SCENE III.

The Execution of Marie Stuart. The queen kneels beside the block, which occupies the centre of the stage. She is engaged in prayer, and holds a small cross. She is attended by two gentlemen and three ladies in mourning. A priest at left corner of the stage lifts up his hand as if exhorting her to a change of religion. The executioner, dressed in red, stands by the block, leaning on a long axe. The block is covered with black cloth.

SCENE IV.

In the next scene, the queen has laid her head upon the block, and the executioner stands with uplifted axe. One of the ladies kneels at the right, and another has fallen into the arms of the third as if she had fainted.

We give the above as a specimen of historical tableaux, which will prove very useful to children in fixing in their minds the studies they are pursuing, as they can form hundreds of scenes in illustration of them.

ELABORATE TABLEAUX.

THE stage for elaborate tableaux must be raised to a level with the eyes of the spectators. The frames must be gilded, and the curtains made of very dark purple cambric, with the dull side towards the stage. A large frame must also be made in front of the drop-curtain nine feet high, and from eighteen to twenty-five feet wide, according to the width of the hall.

The gas-rod must contain twenty-six five-foot burners, and be placed over the curtain inside, eight feet and a half from the floor of the stage. These burners must be fed from an upright pipe at the left side. Upon this pipe, two powerful argand-burners must be fastened, five feet from the floor, each provided with a swinging arm, one of them with a green globe and chimney, and the other with a red. Behind each globe a large concave reflector is to be held. By this simple contrivance, colored light can be thrown to any part of the stage.

For statuary, or moonlight scenes, turn the upper light nearly out, and throw green on. For sunrise, begin as above, then gradually turn on the upper light, and place the reflector behind the red globe. For the pictures, take off the red globe, and substitute a common white chimney, and throw the light upon the faces of the performers in the frames. For the arrangement of the frames and curtains, you can refer to the previous chapter; but it will be best to have your curtain roll up in the manner of a common window-curtain.

Outside of the large front frame, you need another gas-rod with ten footlights, which must be turned down for the pictures and still scenes. They will be useful to light the front part of the stage during the pantomime and illustrated ballads.

To make a boat, which will be needed for many scenes, lay two boards upon the floor so that they will fit together very closely at the edge; the dimensions should be about fourteen feet in length, fifteen inches in width, and half an inch in thickness. Planed white-wood, or clear pine boards, are the most suitable. Screw three cleats firmly upon these flat boards, one near each end, and one at the centre. Turn the whole over, and you have a flat surface fourteen feet in length and two and a half in width. Draw upon one end the profile of the bow of a boat, and upon the other the stern. Saw the ends carefully, following your drawing. Paint the whole of a light chrome-yellow. Shave the upper edge into a slight curve, beginning eight inches from the bow, and descending to the middle, then ascending to within twenty-five inches of the stern. Then paint a black stripe, three-fourths of an inch wide, six inches below the upper edge, following as nearly as possible the curve; and, six inches apart, two more stripes below it. Next shade the bow in black, also following the curve from the upper edge to a distance of two feet from the lower edge. Saw out a figure-head and rudder to fasten upon the ends by screws. Stretch a strip of blue cambric, eight inches wide, across the front of the stage, having three wavy lines of white painted upon it for water. The boat is held up by the persons who sit behind it on boxes; the sail is made of a sheet tacked upon a mast, which is held by a boy.

As a specimen of a boat scene, I will describe to you "Cleopatra going to meet Mark Antony." For this, you will need a board, five feet long, raised to the height of the boat, upon two boxes; one soap-box, on which the rower sits; an oar five feet long; a narrow mattress, and three pillows, to form the couch; a high box at the bow, for Fame to stand upon; a trumpet, and bow and arrow, made of tin; two high stools; a canopy made of a scarf; a silver waiter with wine; and a guitar; one large, handsome lady, with long black hair, for Cleopatra; five ladies as attendants; one little child as Cupid; and one tall lady with very long light hair, as Fame, dressed in plain white drapery. Cleopatra wears a loose white waist richly trimmed with gold-paper; a cloth of gold covers her; and long chains hang from her crown, and extend from her dress to the bracelets upon her arms. The attendants wear loose waists of red, black, and yellow; their skirts are concealed by the boat. All should wear gold chains and ornaments, which can be made of gold-paper. Another cloth is needed to cover the pillows, which is made by cutting gold-paper into fancy figures, and sewing it upon lace.

Cleopatra reclines upon the mattress and pillows, which are placed upon the board platform, near the stern of the boat. One attendant holds the helm; two others hold the canopy above her head; a fourth is passing the wine; and a fifth sits at the oar. The Cupid stands upon a high stool near the centre. Fame is upon a box at the bow, holding a trumpet; and the sixth attendant, with the guitar, stands upon a high stool near the centre. Show this scene first in strong light, and next by moonlight and sunrise, as explained above.

"The Triumph of Ceres" is another very beautiful scene, in which the same arrangement of boat and furniture is used. Ceres stands in the centre, surrounded by the seasons: Spring, a little girl in white, holding a lily; Summer, a lovely blonde, reclining, covered with flowers; Autumn, a brunette, in brown dress covered with autumn-leaves, holding on her head a basket of fruit; Winter, an old man with cloak and hat covered with cotton snow. Old Father Time, with a large scythe, stands at the stern; and a lovely young lady, in the attitude of sowing seeds, bends forward at the bow. Ceres holds a sickle in her right hand, and a sheaf of grain in her left; she wears a loose white robe, and a wreath of poppies and grain.

THE LILY MAID OF ASTOLAT.

IN this scene, a beautiful blonde lies in the boat with her feet toward the bow; her hair hangs over the pillow, which is richly trimmed with gold paper. She is dressed in white muslin; a red cloth covered with gilt paper is drawn to her waist. She holds a letter in her left, and an open letter in her right. A very old man, with flowing white hair and beard, leans upon an oar at the stern. While this scene is shown, it is well to have a selection read aloud from Tennyson's "Elaine," in which a full description of it can be found.

A series of tableaux accompanied with readings can be made from the "Courtship of Miles Standish," the most common of which are, the offer to Priscilla made for Standish by John Alden, and the wedding ceremony. Sometimes the whole poem is read and illustrated. Longfellow's "Evangeline" has been superbly performed in the same manner, and is full of exquisite tableaux to which the reading gives new life.

JARLEY WAX-WORKS.

CHARACTERS.

- MRS. JARLEY. — Black or figured dress, red shawl, huge bonnet.
- LITTLE NELL. — White or calico dress, hat over arm, long stick.
- CHINESE GIANT. — Curtain of Turkey-red or patch, tied round the waist, long enough to reach to the ground when he stands upon a high stool; patch quilt, or curtain, folded over shoulders, shawl fashion; bright lamp-shade on his head, long cue of braided list.
- DWARF. — Kneeling child with large shoes to show in front of dress, white hair of tow or wicking; dark dress, cap, bowl, and spoon.
- MARTHA BANGS. — Black dress, sheet thrown carelessly over, black hair flowing, left hand up to forehead, pickle-jar in right hand.
- MRS. WINSLOW. — Dark dress, ruffled cap, white apron, bottle of soothing-sirup in right hand, rag-baby or large doll in left hand.
- MERMAID. — White dress, green skirt, mostly concealed behind Giant; long, light, flowing locks, hand-glass and comb in hands.
- THE BOY THAT STOOD ON THE BURNING DECK. — Fireman's shirt and trumpet; clothes on hind side before.
- CAPTAIN KIDD. — Red shirt, straw or military hat, pistol, and sword.
- HIS VICTIM. — White dress, red cape, flowing hair.
- LORD BYRON. — Black cloak, broad white collar.
- BLUEBEARD. — Red dressing-gown, loose white pantaloons, turban, large key.
- SIAMESE TWINS. — Two men or boys, different sizes, joined by a white roll of paper.

Mrs. Jarley sits at right of stage by a great drum, or table, and Nell is dusting and arranging the figures as the curtain rises.

Mrs. Jarley describes the figures as they are pointed out by Nell:—

THE CHINESE GIANT. — This figure is universally allowed to be the tallest figure in my collection. He originated in the two provinces of Oolong and Shang-high, one province not being long enough to produce him. On account of his extreme length, it is impossible to give any adequate idea of him in one entertainment: consequently he will be continued in our next.

THE CELEBRATED WELSH DWARF. — This wonderful child has created some interest in the medical and scientific world, from the fact that he was thirteen years old when he was born, and kept on growing older and older, until he died at the somewhat advanced age of two hundred and ninety-seven, in consequence of eating too freely of pies and cakes, his favorite food.

MARTHA BANGS, the miserable maniac who poisoned fourteen families by giving them pickled walnuts, and then wandered about from house to house observing the effect of the pestiferous pickles. She holds in her right hand the fatal jar, which has plunged so many happy families into the deepest despair; you will observe also the wild confusion of ideas expressed by her raving locks. It is of this classic figure that the poet Burns speaks in his comic poem of "Casabianca." To use the words of the lamented John Phoenix, "Face white as the driven snow, hair black as the driven charcoal."

The children's friend, the parent's assistant, the mother's hope, MRS. S. A. WINSLOW, a nurse of thirty year's standing. She holds in her hand a bottle of that wonderful sirup which has soothed the sorrows of so many suffering sisters. I cannot do better justice to this remarkable fluid, than by quoting a few stanzas from the celebrated comic poet Ossian in his great melodramatic poem of "Marmion:" "Soothing-sirup adds new lustre to the cheek of beauty, smooths the wrinkles from the furrowed brow of age, and is also excellent for chilblains."

The celebrated FEEJEE MERMAID, combining, as you well know, the principal properties of a beautiful woman joined to those of a lovely fish.

This BOY, ladies and gentlemen, had the extreme foolishness to stand upon the burning deck. Turning to look in the direction "whence" Albut "he had fled," his head became completely turned, so that he was picked up insensible from among the burning embers; and his face has been firmly fixed the wrong way ever since.

CAPTAIN KIDD, the robber of the main, supposed to have originated somewhere Down East. His whole life being spent upon the stormy deep, he amassed an immense fortune, and buried it in the sand along the flower-clad banks of Cape Cod, by which course he invented the savings banks, now so common along shore. Having hidden away so much property, which, like many modern investments, never can be unearthed, he was known as a great sea-cretur.

Before him kneels his lovely and innocent victim, the LADY BLOUSABELLA INFANTINA, who was several times taken and murdered by the bloodthirsty tyrant, which accounts for the calm look of resignation depicted upon her lovely countenance.

BLUEBEARD, the well-known philanthropist, the loving father and tender husband. — But little is known of the early history of this celebrated personage except that his name was Nathan Beard, and he kept a seminary for young ladies at Walpole, Mass., where he endeavored to instil into the female mind those qualities in which they are so painfully deficient, — curiosity, and love of approbation. Failing, of course, in this, he became so blue and low-spirited, that he was known by the nick name of Bluebeard, which title he bore until his death, which occurred during the latter portion of his life. In his hand he holds the instrument which he used throughout his long and successful career: it will be at once recognized by every true scholar as the "Key to Colburn's Arithmetic," Part Third.

THE SIAMESE TWINS. — These remarkable brothers lived together in the greatest harmony, — indeed, were never seen apart in their lives, although there was always a bone of contention between them. One of them was born in the island of Borneo, the other on the southern extremity of Cape Ann.

To an audience of such cultivation and taste as the one before me, it is superfluous to describe this figure. It is easily recognized by you all as LARD BEERON, as he appeared when composing his celebrated novel of "The Coarse Hair," which holds an equal rank with the following popular works: "What's on the Mind," "Locke on the Understanding," and "The Pleasures of Imagination" by Akin Side.

This usually concludes my exhibition; but I shall now proceed to do what I seldom do. I shall wind up my figures. These are all fitted with clockworks inside, so that when they are wound up they will go through the exact motions they would have done had they been alive. In fact, many people have supposed them to be alive, they look so very natural; but I assure you they are all made of wood and wax, blockheads every one.

Nell winds each one up with a watchman's rattle. When wound up, the Giant bows low, then wags his head three times, and bows again as before; the Dwarf eats; Martha Bangs lifts her bottle, and tears her hair; Mrs. Winslow trots baby, and gives it soothing-sirup; Mermaid turns her head, and combs her hair, looking in hand-glass; the Boy slowly revolves; Captain Kidd lifts his sword over his victim, who raises her hands, and groans; Lord Byrön rolls his eyes, and writes in a book; Bluebeard raises his key, and turns his head; Siamese Twins begin to fight.

All move very slowly and stiffly at first, then go faster and faster, when at a signal the clockwork runs down, and they stop.

THE BABES IN THE WOODS.

CHARACTERS AND COSTUMES.

THE CRUEL UNCLE.—Dressing-gown, hair powdered with flour, high hat, cane, and spectacles.

THE BOY. } Two very large boys, one dressed in short jacket and
THE GIRL. } pantaloons, the other in a short dress, bonnet, and } apron.

THE RUFFIANS.—Two very small boys with beards marked on their faces with burnt cork, paper hats, carving-knives in sashes tied about their waists.

THE ROBINS.—Two very tall boys, with tin tunnels, or rolls of brown paper, fastened over their mouths and noses, red shawls tied from their necks to their knees, and feather brushes fastened upon their backs.

THE SUN AND THE MOON.—Two hoops, one covered with a red, and one with a green cloth. They are raised and lowered by a boy concealed behind a table which stands in the east corner of the room, and is covered by a waterproof-cloak.

SCENE I.

The Babes come tripping in, hand in hand: they bow to the audience, and begin a game of marbles. The Cruel Uncle enters, and orders them to bed; he points to the sun, which slowly sets behind the table. They run across the stage different ways; he limps after them, catches the Boy, and drags him after the Girl. Just as he seizes her, the Boy falls, and the old man trips over him. He rises, shakes them both, and drags them away after him. The Uncle returns, and paces the stage in wrath. A knock is heard at the door; the Ruffians enter very cautiously; the Uncle pantomimes to them that he wishes them to kill the children. They hold out their hands, and demand money; he goes out for a large bag, and gives them some. They ask for more; he shakes his head, but finally gives it to them. They brandish their knives, and go out.

SCENE II.

The Uncle leads out the Babes, one by each hand; they pick flowers, and gambol on the grass, and he steals away, and leaves them. The Ruffians rush in, and attack the Babes. The Boy gallantly defends his sister; one Ruffian is moved to tears at the sight, and attacks the other, and after a terrific combat chases him out of the room. The moon rises slowly; and the children wander about until the Girl sits down, and expresses her hunger by pointing to her mouth. The Boy rushes off for food; returns, and finds his sister stretched out upon the ground; he cries, rubbing his eyes, and shaking the tears from his fingers. He tries in vain to restore her, and finally drops down by her side; the moon sinks down also.

SCENE III.

The sun slowly rises. The children are stretched out upon the ground. A chirp is heard; the Robins come hopping in, one behind the other; they hop a few times, then stop suddenly, chirp, and hop again. They discover the Babes; hop over them, and go out. They soon return, each with a large cabbage-leaf which they drop upon them, and go and come until they have covered the Babes, when they hop over them three times. The Uncle enters with the Ruffians, the first of whom draws out a small handkerchief, the second a larger one, and the Uncle a very large one. All wipe their eyes. The Babes then rise; all join hands, bow, and march out in single file, the Robins last.

THE MAGIC MIRROR.

THIS beautiful scene is intended to illustrate an old legend, which should be related to the audience in advance. A great prince once lost his beloved bride, who was stolen by the fairies. In despair he applied to a famous magician, who, for a handsome reward, agreed to show him a vision of his lost love. For this purpose he conjured up in turn many pictures of fair women, each one of which served only to increase the disappointment of the unhappy lover, until at last his enraptured eyes beheld the likeness of the lost lady in full bridal costume. Overcome with joy, the prince fell upon his knees before the portrait, which seemed to look lovingly upon him. The magician waved his wand, and the picture seemed to start from the canvas and slowly become a living reality. She extended her arms to the happy prince, and they were united, never again to be parted.

This scene can be produced in any room by using the frame described in previous chapter, but if it is desirable to prepare it hastily, place tables close against the back wall, to make a platform across the end of the room. Next procure two strips of wood, of a length just equal to the height of the room, and not over one inch thick and five inches wide. Lay them upon the floor, and fasten a large portrait-frame on them with screws, in such a manner that, when raised, the lower edge of the frame will be level with the top of the platform. This frame should be seven feet in height and five feet wide; it can be made of pine boards five inches wide and half an inch thick, and covered with gilt paper or yellow paint, in case a real frame cannot be procured. Fasten these strips upright in the centre of the room, close in front of the platform, and drape all the space around it with dark shawls extending to the walls, the floor, and the ceiling. Hang a dark shawl behind the frame upon the wall for a background.

The magician occupies the right side of the stage and the prince the left, each standing upon the floor in such a position that he can look upon the frame without turning the back upon the audience. The frame is, of course, between them, in the centre, and about two feet from the floor. The girls who are to appear as visions stand upon the platform, on the right of the frame, concealed by the drapery. The first one glides slowly across the frame from right to left, as slowly as possible, and with an almost imperceptible motion of the body. When she reaches the centre of the frame, she turns very slowly, and looks upon the prince, who makes a gesture of disappointment; upon which she turns toward the left again, and disappears, gliding upon the platform behind the drapery at the left of the frame. As soon as she has disappeared, the second follows, and all proceed in turn in the same manner. The magician waves his hand as each one passes by, and whispers to them when they have reached the centre, so that they may know when to turn. When the bride appears to have reached the centre of the frame, the magician makes motions in the air with his wand, as if to recall her to life, and the prince kneels before her as she slowly extends her arms. Any number may participate in this vision, as the curtain can be lowered while the persons upon the concealed platform are changed. The story should be related to the audience while waiting, and a waltz or march should be played upon the piano.

The magician's robe may be made of a curtain, and his wig and beard of cotton or wool. He should have a bright turban, and a cane wound with gilt paper for a wand.

The prince should wear dark, short pantaloons, with long white stockings, loose white shirt trimmed with gold-paper fringe, and an opera-cape over the left shoulder.

The girls should display as much variety as possible in their dress: some appearing with long trains and with powdered hair, and some in simple muslin. The bride should wear white, and, if possible, a long veil also.

This entertainment has been produced in New York with great brilliancy during the winter, at charitable entertainments for several good objects. At a beautiful village on the Hudson River it also formed the chief attraction of a series of performances for the benefit of a church fund. On this occasion, when the curtain rose, a large frame formed the only ornament of a small room draped in black, lighted from the top by twenty powerful gas-jets, which were invisible to the audience. The prince—a handsome young gentleman, in a costume of blue satin richly embroidered in silver—stood upon the left, and a member of the New York bar, dressed in a long crimson robe, occupied the right of the stage. A flowing white beard and wig concealed his features, and he slowly waved a golden wand in his right hand. A graceful lady, in a brilliant cherry-colored silk dress, glided across the frame so slowly that she scarcely seemed to move; and as the light gradually increased, she seemed to have come out of the shadowy background by magic. In the centre of the frame she turned toward the prince, showing her exquisite profile to the audience, and disappeared as she had come, seeming to melt away, and was followed by a stately lady in a rich dress of black and orange satin. Next came a queen in dress and presence, with crown and jewels to match. Then a train of court ladies in alternate blue, pink, buff, lilac, and scarlet costumes were followed by a lovely blonde in green, whose powdered hair and diamond ornaments well became their various styles of beauty. Strange as it may seem, to each one of these the fastidious prince showed his disappointment; but when the beautiful bride — attired in white satin, with a flowing veil — made her appearance, he fell upon his knees as she slowly bent forward toward him, and the curtain descended to the music of a dreamy waltz, which had accompanied the entire performance.

THE MISER'S SUPPER.

(Trick Pantomime for Three Boys.)

THE MISER. — Old dress-coat.

SERVANT. — Shirt-sleeves, apron.

BOY, concealed under the table.

Plate, knife and fork, plate of meat, glass full of molasses-and-water, long straw or tube of macaroni bent in a form of a syphon, newspaper, bag of tin money, piece of money with a long horse-hair or black sewing-silk tied to it. A candle neatly fastened to a long white stair-rail so as to make it three feet long. Two short eatable candle-ends in candlesticks: these candles are cut from an apple, and have wicks made of almonds. A table covered with a cloth, in the middle of the top of which is a small trap-door opening downward, fastened with a hinge and button on the under side; on the right front corner a candlestick stands, with a hole in the bottom, over a hole in the table, through which the long candlestick is slowly pushed or lowered. Two auger-holes are made near the candlestick, and a cloth of same color as the table-cloth is neatly pasted over the table-top, through which the holes and cracks for the trap-door are neatly cut. The table-cloth should be tacked upon a strip which stands half an inch higher than the edge of the table in front. The boy who is to perform the tricks should be under the table when the folding-doors are opened or the curtain is raised. An empty glass. A tame cat under the table. A chair.

Enter miser, with bag of money, which he lays on the trap-door in centre of the table. Servant enters, places chair at right end of table, brings plate, knife and fork, and tumbler, and puts them down before miser, who points to his mouth to show his hunger. Servant strikes his left palm to show he must have money. Miser reaches for bag, which is gone. He accuses servant of having stolen it, and they search the room and are about to fight, when they discover that the bag is just where he left it; he takes out a piece of money, which the servant takes and puts into the tumbler. The money dances up and down very rapidly, being pulled by the invisible string. Both appear alarmed. When the money is quiet, servant takes up the tumbler, and the money jumps out and disappears. The miser gives him more, and he goes out for a newspaper, which the miser begins to read, holding it close to the candle, which the servant lights for him with a match. The candle slowly rises; the miser is absorbed in his paper, and rises as fast as the candle, until he sits upon the top of his chair-back, with his feet upon the seat. As the candle descends, he comes down with it to his place. The same action is repeated. The servant then brings a glass of molasses-and-water, at which the old man smacks his lips with delight, sips a little of it, and places it near the auger-hole, and returns to his paper. The tube is put up, and the glass emptied through it. The miser picks up the glass, raises it to his lips, and seems much surprised that it is empty. The servant brings a plate of meat, goes for tin cover which he places over it, and when he lifts the cover to help the miser, the plate is empty. He goes for more, but returns and finds it all right. As the miser prepares to eat, the candle is pulled down and extinguished. The servant runs out and brings the two eatable candles. The other candle then appears, and is lighted by the servant. He then discovers that the dish and cover have both disappeared, and is about to go for more. The miser is so hungry that he eats both the candles, holding them in his mouth until he comes to the wicks, which he eats last. He is about to eat the long candle, when he discovers that the covered dish is in its place. He lifts the cover eagerly, and a cat jumps out; he runs away in horror, and the curtain falls.

LOVE IN AMBUSH.

CHARACTERS.

STEPHEN THE PARENT. — Swallowtail-coat, hair powdered.

FRANK THE LOVER. — White pantaloons, frock coat, eye-glass.

JENNY THE MAIDEN. — Calico dress, white apron.

PROPERTIES. — Table, ironing-board just the size of the top of the table, clothes-basket, handkerchiefs, iron, pattern, two letters, sheet of paper, pencil, soap-box, white hat, overcoat, cane, straw hat, newspaper.

Curtain rises. Jenny is ironing at table in centre. Stephen sits reading newspaper at left end of table, his overcoat, cane, and hat are on chair at R. Jenny often leaves her work, and runs to door as if expecting somebody; but her father directs her to continue her work. She seems very impatient and anxious to get rid of him, and shows him a pattern, as if she wanted him to go to the store; but he shakes his head and examines his pockets as if he had no money. A knock is heard. Jenny seems more anxious, and finally gets rid of the old man by showing him a letter to take to the mail. She puts on his coat and hat, gives him his cane, and helps him off. As he goes out of the door, she leads in Frank behind his back. They shake hands as if overjoyed to meet; she gives him a chair, and takes another at the opposite side of the stage; they cast glances and gradually draw their chairs together. He takes her hand, kneels down, and expresses his devotion in fervent gestures. A cough is heard, they express consternation, and rush across the stage. Another cough, and they seize the table and carry it away. Jenny then takes the basket off of the box, R., and places it exactly where the table stood, and makes Frank kneel upon the box and rest his hands upon it. She places the board upon his back and covers it with a sheet, so that a table is formed precisely like the other one. She then begins to iron vigorously. Stephen enters, takes off his overcoat, and places his hat and cane on one chair and draws up the other to the left of the table and prepares to sit down. Frank kicks away the chair and he sits heavily upon the floor. Stephen shakes his fist at Jenny, who motions that she was busy ironing and did not touch the chair. He then repeats the experiment with same result. Jenny then holds the chair firmly in place, while Stephen carefully sits down and reads his letters. He then directs her to bring paper and pencil, and begins to write, when Frank dances the table up and down with all his might. Stephen accuses Jenny of shaking the table, but she denies it. Seeing that the table is still, Stephen again attempts in vain to write. He then discovers Frank's hat on the floor in front of the table, and holds it up, asking whose it is? Jenny puts it on his head, and he seems satisfied until he discovers his own and brings it to her. She then puts Frank's hat on her own head and walks around the table. Stephen follows her very doubtfully and shakes his head. As he passes the left end of the table he receives a kick from Frank and comes forward rubbing his leg. He then takes his cane and pushes under the table. Frank rises and throws the sheet over Stephen's head, and the lovers exit as

CURTAIN FALLS.

THE SLEEPING BEAUTY.

CHARACTERS.

KING. — Ermine robe, crown.

QUEEN. — Silk dress with ermine, crown.

FOUR GENTLEMEN. — Knee-breeches, white stockings, cloaks over left shoulder.

FOUR LADIES OF HONOR. — Silk train-dresses, powdered hair.

COOK. — White apron, white pantaloons.

PAGE. — Knee-breeches and cloak, like Gentlemen of Honor.

TWO MAIDS. — Calico dress and white aprons.

TWO MUSICIANS. — Costumed like Gentlemen of Honor, excepting the cloak.

SIX LITTLE GIRLS FOR FAIRIES. — Thin white muslin dresses, spangled with gold-paper.

OLD WOMAN. — Black dress, white apron and kerchief.

THE PRINCE. — Very showy dress, like Gentlemen of Honor.

THE BEAUTY. — White satin, like Ladies of Honor.

SCENE I.

The queen sits at R., rocking a cradle. The king rises and receives five of the fairies who enter L. After much ceremony, the maids enter and set a table for the fairies, who sit around it. The page places before each a golden plate, at which they are much pleased. The cook brings in the dinner, with the help of the maids. While they are busily engaged, the sixth fairy enters angrily, and the page places a chair for her and goes for a plate, returning with a common one. The fairy demands a golden one. When the page explains to her that there are but five, she grows more indignant, dashes her plate upon the floor. The king tries in vain to pacify her, but she points at the cradle in a threatening manner. The other fairies gather around as if to shield the child, on which tableaux the

CURTAIN FALLS.

SCENE II.

The king and queen are seated in centre. Beauty sits on a couch at their right; an old woman enters with a distaff at L. Beauty watches her eagerly, and motions her to draw near. The old woman comes up to the couch. Beauty takes the distaff and falls on the couch as if overcome with sleep. The old woman waves her cane, and the king and queen, the gentlemen and ladies of honor, who stand in a semicircle at back of stage, all fall asleep in the attitudes in which they stand, and the

CURTAIN FALLS.

SCENE III.

The kitchen. One maid is sweeping at L. The cook is stirring some soup. One of the maids is boxing the page's ear, and the other is in the act of drinking. The old woman waves her cane, and all fall asleep in their attitudes.

SCENE IV.

The same scene as the second, with all the characters asleep in the attitudes in which they were left.

The prince slowly enters L, looks around in the greatest amazement, and examines the different persons curiously. He discovers Beauty, expresses astonishment and rapture. Kneels and kisses her hand. Beauty rises. All the characters yawn, wake up, and follow the prince, who leads Beauty out R. The king and queen bring up the rear.

CURTAIN FALLS.

SCENE V.

Kitchen, with sleeping characters as in Scene III. When the prince and Beauty lead the procession in, all perform the acts they had commenced when put asleep. The cook stirs the soup; the maid boxes the page's ear; the other maids drink and sweep.

SCENE VI.

Same room as Scene IV. The procession enters, led by two musicians, who stand at back of stage. The fairies enter and stand at back corner, R. The prince and Beauty stop in centre. The gentlemen and ladies join hands around them; all salute the centre couple and begin the dance.

All hands around; all forward and back twice, bowing as they advance. The centre couple promenade out of the circle, divide, and stand together behind the dancers. Eight hands around; forward and back twice; turn partner by right hand; corner by left; every lady turns under her partner's hand, which is held up. Four ladies cross right hand; left hand back, keeping hold in centre; take their partners by the left hand and revolve in a star; stand in star-figure, raising up the left hands of the gentlemen, so the fairies can pass under, which they do twice; all turn partners; all promenade. The above figure is repeated as before, excepting that the gentlemen form the centre of the star. After which, all hands around; forward and back to circle; all keep hold of hands, as the prince winds up the whole; and, when all are in a compact circle, he leads out under the upraised hands forward to the centre; and all form a semicircle at back. The king and queen enter. The prince and Beauty kneel before the king, who joins their hands, and the fairies dance around them in a ring. All bow to audience as the

CURTAIN FALLS.

Illustrated Ballads form a charming entertainment for a winter evening, as they require slight rehearsal and little or no scenery. They can be very effectively performed in any parlor, by children of any age, who possess a good ear for time and a thorough appreciation of the spirit of the song. The words must be distinctly sung by a performer, who may be concealed from view of the audience if preferred. As each line is sung, the actors must present, in pantomime, its appropriate action in exact time to the melody.

AULD ROBIN GRAY.

CHARACTERS.

AULD ROBIN GRAY. — Gray suit, knee-breeches, long vest, plaid, white wig, or powdered hair.

JAMIE. — Kilt, plaid, pea-jacket, sailor-hat.

JEANNIE. — Plaid skirt tucked up over white, white waist, black bodice, plaid scarf.

MOTHER. — Black or brown dress, white kerchief, white apron.

FATHER. — Gray or brown suit, — wrapped in plaid, left arm in sling.

FURNITURE. — 1st SCENE, crown for JAMIE; 2d SCENE, two chairs, R. for parents, small chair, C., at small spinning-wheel; 3d SCENE, box for door-stone, C.; 4th SCENE, great chair, with pillows, quilt, &c., for ROBIN, C., small table, cup, medicine.

SCENE I. — JAMIE, R., and JEANNIE, L., discovered in attitude of parting lovers, C.

Young Jamie loved me well, and	JAMIE kneels on left knee. sought me for his bride,
But saving a crown he hath	JAMIE shows crown-piece; both
nothing else beside.	sadly shake their heads.
To make the crown a pound, my	JAMIE points off, L., and exit,
Jamie ga'ed to sea,	L., at the word "sea."
And the crown and the pound	JEANNIE follows him three
were a' baith for me.	steps, parts, comes forward
	sadly with clasped hands.

[Curtain falls.

SCENE II.—FATHER and MOTHER in chairs, L.; JEANNIE, C., at wheel, hands clasped in lap.

He had na' been gone a year JEANNIE in attitude of despair, and a day, hands clasped.

When my father brake his arm, Looks sadly at her father.
and our cow was stolen away.

My mother she fell sick, my Turns towards her mother.

Jamie at the sea,

And Auld Robin Gray came a ROBIN GRAY enters, L. or C., courtin' to me. kneels to JEANNIE, and takes her right hand; she turns away in disgust and looks down.

My father could not work, my ROBIN GRAY points to each; mother could not spin, JEANNIE sadly watches his motions.

I toiled day and night, but their JEANNIE spins at wheel, C.
bread I could not win.

Auld Rob maintained them ROBIN kneels and implores with baith, and with tears in his e'e, tears.

Said, "Jeannie, for their sakes, JEANNIE turns away as he takes oh, pray, marry me." her hand.

My father urged me sair, my JEANNIE is led by ROBIN across mother did na' speak; to her parents, and kneels with her hands across her MOTHER'S lap.

But she looked in my face till MOTHER regards JEANNIE earn-my heart was like to break; estly as she kneels before her, R.

So they gied him my hand, tho' ROBIN crosses from C. to R., my heart was on the sea, takes JEANNIE'S hand from MOTHER.

And Auld Robin Gray was a ROBIN leads JEANNIE to C. gude man to me. and draws her hand through his arm, looking fondly at JEANNIE, who looks sadly down.

[Curtain falls.]

SCENE III.—JEANNIE discovered sitting at door, very sad.

I had na' been his wife but weeks only four,

When sitting so mournfully at She slowly lifts her head from my own door, her hand.

I saw my Jamie's ghost, for I could not think it he,
Till he said, "I've come home,
love, to marry thee."
Oh, sair did we greet, and mickle did we say;
We took na' kiss at all, I bid him gang away;
For I will do my best a good wife for to be,
For Auld Robin Gray is very kind to me.

JAMIE enters, L.; JEANNIE, in fright, motions him away.
They rush into each other's arms.
They bow their heads, then lift their heads as if conversing.
JEANNIE pushing him away;
exit JAMIE sadly, L.
JEANNIE comes forward, extends her hands.
Sinks back into her seat, bowed with sorrow.

[Curtain falls.]

SCENE IV.—ROBIN at C., in arm-chair, propped up by cushions or pillows.

The nights were long and sad,
the days were dull and wae,
But that which grieved me most was Auld Robin Gray.
He sickened day by day, and nothing would he take,
But said, "Tho' I am like to die,
'tis better for her sake.
Is Jamie come?" he said, and Jamie by us stood.
"I've wronged you sair," he said, "now let me do some good.
I give you all, young man, my houses and my kine,
And the good wife herself, who should not have been mine."
We kissed his clay-cold hands, a smile came o'er his face.
Said Jamie, "He is pardoned before the Throne of Grace!
O Jeannie, see that smile; forgiven I'm sure he is;
Who could resist temptation while hoping to win thee?"

JEANNIE bends over him, R.
JEANNIE smooths his hair from his forehead.
JEANNIE passes cup from table,
R., which he refuses.
JEANNIE kneels for the old man's blessing.
JAMIE enters, L.
ROBIN grasps JAMIE's hands.
JAMIE kneels, L., and ROBIN points off, L.
JEANNIE kneels, he joins their hands, they bow their heads for his blessing.
They rise, lift his hands to their lips, and then suffer them to drop heavily.
JAMIE points up, L., one hand on arm of chair.
JAMIE turns to JEANNIE.
ROBIN falls back in death.
JEANNIE kneels, R.; JAMIE points up, L.

[Curtain falls.]

THE MISTLETOE BOUGH.

AN ILLUSTRATED BALLAD.

CHARACTERS.

THE BRIDE. — White dress and veil, wreath, also a faded wreath.
LOVELL. — Knee-breeches of white paper-cambric, coat faced with same, ruffled shirt, white cravat, white wig and beard for last scenes.

THE BARON, } same as LOVELL, excepting bright-
FOUR GENTLEMEN or BOYS, } colored breeches and facings.

FOUR LADIES or GIRLS. — Silk train-dresses, powdered hair.

THE BARONESS. — Black dress in same style.

SIX LITTLE CHILDREN in ordinary dress.

FURNITURE. — One table, one chair, two boxes. Front, side, and lid of chest, four and one-half feet long, two and one-half high, fastened at inside corners with hooks, which must be unhooked when the chest falls in last scene.

[At rise of curtain the bride and Lovell stand in centre of stage at back. The baron and baroness at the left hand of Lovell. The others stand in two lines at side, gentlemen at right hand of partners. They dance as follows: head couple forward and back, sides forward and back twice and bow, grand right and left. The pianist must play the melody, and as the bride and Lovell meet at head of the stage, the singer must twice sing the chorus, "O the Mistletoe Bough." At the word "bough," the couples join right hands and bow, first to partner, then to opposites, in exact time with music. The song then begins, the same dance coming in as marked.]

The mistletoe hung in the castle hall,
 The holly branch shone on the old oak wall;
 And the baron's retainers were blithe and gay,
 And keeping their Christmas holiday.

LOVELL leads his BRIDE forward and points up.
 They go backward to place, he points to sides of stage.
 Sides forward and back, bow, and begin the dance, which goes on as above.

(Dance.)

(Sing.) The baron beheld with a father's pride
 His beautiful child, young Lovell's bride,
 While she with her bright eyes seemed to be
 The star of the goodly company.

LOVELL leads BRIDE to BARON, who salutes her; he then leads her to centre of stage and puts a ring upon her finger.
 They look tenderly at each other, and remain in centre hand in hand, until chorus, when they bow first to each other, then to sides.

CHORUS.

O the Mistletoe bough!
 O the Mistletoe bough!

All bow as before.

(Dance.)

"I'm weary of dancing now," she cried;
 "Here tarry a moment, I'll hide, I'll hide!
 And, Lovell, be sure thou 'rt the first to trace
 The clew to my secret lurking-place."
 Away she ran, and her friends began
 Each tower to search, and each nook to scan;
 And young Lovell cried, "O where dost thou hide?
 I'm lonesome without thee, my own dear bride."
 O the Mistletoe bough!

BRIDE comes forward, stretches out her hands wearily, places left hand on LOVELL's shoulder, who also comes forward; she points over her shoulder and runs off at the right. Dancers cross and go out.
 LOVELL expresses despair. BARONESS comes forward, places her right hand on his shoulder. They salute each other, then bow to audience at chorus.
 [Curtain falls.]

SCENE II. — Chest in centre, table tipped over at right of stage, chair on floor at left. The melody is played. BRIDE enters hastily: first hides behind table, then decides to enter chest, draws up chair and steps in. The chorus is then sung, and the BRIDE lets the lid fall heavily at last note.

They sought that night, and they	The dancers enter slowly, pause
sought her next day,	a moment, then cross and exit.
And they sought her in vain,	[Curtain falls.]
when a week passed away.
In the highest, the lowest, the loneliest spot, Young Lovell sought wildly, but found her not.

SCENE III. — CHILDREN are playing "Thread the Needle," in time to the melody; they stop suddenly, two of them point to right of stage.

And years flew by, and their	LOVELL appears at right, dressed grief at last	as an old man, and crosses the
Was told as a sorrowful tale	stage slowly.
long past;
And when Lovell appeared, the	He bows his head and weeps, then
children cried,	salutes the CHILDREN, who
"See! the old man weeps for	bow to him and then to audi-
his fairy bride."	ence. [Curtain falls.]
O the Mistletoe bough!

SCENE IV. — Same as SCENE III., except that the chest is unhooked at corners, and the faded wreath inside.

At length an oak chest, that had	Old man slowly enters, and at-
long lain hid,	tempts to raise the lid, pushes
Was found in the castle. They	the right corner and chest falls. raised the lid,	He holds up the wreath with
And a skeleton form lay mould-	trembling fingers. Gazes with
ering there,	horror on the chest. Turns to
In the bridal wreath of the lady	audience and points towards fair!	it. He kneels, and at last note
O, sad was her fate! in sportive	of chorus falls on ruins of the
jest	chest.

She hid from her lord in the old oak chest;
It closed with a spring! and her bridal bloom
Lay withering there in a living tomb.

O the Mistletoe bough!

[Curtain falls.]

VILLIKENS AND HIS DENIAH.

AN ILLUSTRATED BALLAD, TO BE PERFORMED BY CHILDREN FROM EIGHT TO TWELVE YEARS OLD.

CHARACTERS.

PARENT. — Top-boots, knee-breeches, swallow-tail coat, ruffled shirt, white cravat, powdered hair.

VILLIKENS. — White pantaloons, swallow-tail coat, ruffled shirt, fancy tie, curled hair.

DENIAH. — Train dress, bright overskirt, hat, large waterfall, Grecian bend.

PROPERTIES. — Two sheets, letter, bottle, carpet-bag, money.
(A concealed Singer begins song as curtain rises.)

I.

There was a rich merchant, in PARENT bows low to audience.
London did dwell,

Who had for a daughter a very PARENT points with left hand.
fine girl;

Her name it was Deniah, just PARENT spreads both hands in sixteen years old, ecstasy.

With a very large fortune, in PARENT rattles money in his silver and gold. pockets.

CHORUS.

Sing tural li lural li lural li la, PARENT dances in time to music, forward.

Sing tural li lural li lural li la, PARENT dances in time to music, backward.

Sing tural li lural li lural li la, PARENT dances in time to music,
forward.

Sing tural li lural li lural li la, PARENT dances in time to music, backward, and bows at last note.

II.

As Deniah was walking the garden one day,
Her father came to her, and thus did he say:

“Go dress yourself, Deniah, in gorgeous array;

And I’ll bring you a husband, both gallant and gay.”

CHORUS.

III.

“O papa, dear papa, I’ve not made up my mind;
To marry just yet I do not feel inclined;
And all my large fortune I’ll gladly give o’er

If you’ll let me be single a year or two more.”

CHORUS.

IV.

“Go, go, boldest daughter!”
the parent replied.

“If you do not consent to be this young man’s bride,
I’ll give your large fortune to the nearest of kin,

And you sha’ n’t reap the benefit of one single pin.

CHORUS.

V.

As Villikens was walking the garden around,
He spied his dear Deniah lying dead on the ground,

DENIAH enters and courtesies to PARENT, who bows in time.

PARENT approaches her, and moves head and hand as if speaking.

PARENT points to DENIAH’s dress, who takes it in her hands and looks upon it.

DENIAH puts finger in her mouth, and turns head away.

Both dance forward and backward together at each line and bow at end.

DENIAH puts right hand on
PARENT’s left shoulder.

DENIAH places left hand coaxingly under his chin.

DENIAH turns to left, moves both hands as if throwing away her money.

DENIAH looks at him implor-ingly, and coaxes him as before.

Both dance forward and backward, and bow in time as before.

PARENT shakes his head and fist very savagely.

DENIAH kneels down and cries.

PARENT makes motions as if throwing away money; takes large pin from his coat.

DENIAH wrings her hands and weeps.

Sung and danced as before.

[Curtain falls.]

VILLIKENS enters, discovers DENIAH lying in centre of stage with bottle and letter;
he jumps, throws up his hands in horror.

With a cup of cold poison lying down by her side,
And a billet-doux, saying by poison she died.

CHORUS.

VILLIKENS picks up bottle and smells of it.

Reads letter in amazement.

VILLIKENS dances forward and backward, looking first at letter in his left hand, then at bottle in his right, extending each hand in turn, bows at last note.

VI.

He kissed her cold corpus a hundred times o'er,

VILLIKENS kneels down behind DENIAH, bends over and pretends to kiss her.

Wrings her hands.

And called her his Deniah, though she was no more;
Then he swallowed the poison like a lover so brave,
And Villikens and his Deniah both lay in one grave.

Drinks from bottle.

Falls behind DENIAH at last note.

CHORUS.

No dance.

[Curtain falls.]

VII.

At twelve next night, by a tall poplar tree,
The ghosts of his children the Parent did see,
Standing close to each other, and both looking blue,
Saying, "We should be both living if it was not for you."

PARENT enters, discovers the lovers standing at back of stage dressed in sheets like ghosts. He jumps, looks first over his left shoulder at them, then over his right shoulder, and continues this motion through rest of verse and chorus.

CHORUS.

Ghosts dance forward and back as before, following PARENT; all bow.

VIII.

Now the Parent was struck with a horror of home,
So he packed his portmanteau, the world over to roam;
But he had not gone far, when he was seized with a shiver
Which ended his days, so finished him forever.

PARENT goes off left for his carpet-bag.

He packs his clothes.

Suddenly turns his head, sees ghosts, and shivers faster and faster until he drops in centre of stage.

CHORUS.

Ghosts dance around PARENT; DENIAH first; both bow.

[Curtain falls.]

NOTE. Swallow-tail coats are easily made by sewing tails on to the boys' jackets; the ruffles are made of paper. The girl can wear a long dress tucked up over her own. The sheets are placed over the heads, leaving only the face exposed. They hold the sheet under their chins with left hands and point with the right. Where a trap-door is available they fall into and rise up from it.

CHARADES.

ALTHOUGH considered easy to act by many persons, these are by far the most difficult of all dramatic scenes. To render them effective, a quick wit and a brilliant conversational talent must be united with the power of imitation. It is, therefore, best to give only the skeleton of a few which have proved successful, leaving them to be endowed with life by the genius of the actors; for those with written conversations often appear tame.

The more extravagant the humor of a well-acted charade the better; so we shall begin with some comic ones, which have often been acted successfully, in which, of course, the pronunciation of the words is considered, and not the spelling.

JEW.

SHYLOCK. — Red dressing-gown, sash, red yarn braid, loose trousers.

ANTONIO. — Tunic, loose pantaloons.

PORTIA. — Dark dress, white cotton wig, like a strong-minded female judge; knife, scales, bond.

Shylock enters, followed by Antonio. He demands payment of a bill for a pound of flesh found on his last month's meat-bill.

Antonio begs for more time; says he will pay him when his ship comes in. Shylock demands immediate payment, or he will sue him. The matter is then referred to the judge, who compels Shylock to produce a pound of beef, as a specimen of the amount at stake. She finds that Shylock has charged too much for his meat, and compels him to discharge Antonio, and to forfeit the piece he has laid before the court. Shylock expresses great discomfiture as the

CURTAIN FALLS.

ILLS.

*Fine lady in rich costume, reclining on a couch.
Pompous doctor.*

Lady in hysterics. Doctor knocks and enters. She gives him a list of many ills and maladies, each one of which he assures her she has no symptoms of.

He then asks her a few questions, such as, "Do you find, that after a hearty lunch, a great dinner, or a game-supper, you experience a loss of appetite or indifference to food?"

"Oh yes, doctor."

"After a hard day's work, and dancing all night, do you ever feel a sense of lassitude?"

"Oh yes! Doctor, you understand my case exactly."

He writes a long prescription, and the

CURTAIN FALLS.

JEWELS.

THE MOTHER OF THE GRACCHI. — Roman costume, draped with sheets.

THE TWO GRACCHI. — Draped with sheets.

The two Gracchi enter, each with a prize-package of candy, containing cheap jewelry, over which they are quarrelling. The mother enters with stately step, pulls the combatants apart by the ears, and takes away the prizes, exclaiming, "These are my jewels!"

CURTAIN FALLS.

NOR.

Noah and his three sons, each with a wife upon his arm, come in, stepping carefully, holding up their dresses and umbrellas as if it were damp. They converse about the various animals, and the difficulty they have experienced in getting them safely into the ark, and exit by another door.

MA.

A lady is seated on a chair at the centre of the stage. A small boy comes running in, calling, "Ma! Ma!" She orders him to do several things without success; and finally says, "Go out of the room." He says, "I wont." She replies, "Stay here; I will be minded."

NORMA.

A procession of druids and nuns enter, dressed in waterproof-cloaks and sheets. Norma follows, in white, with a wreath of oak-leaves. They march three times round the stage and arrange themselves in a semi-circle. Norma kneels and sings, in burlesque, Casta Diva.

The moon rises behind the table, and all march out, chanting the well-known march.

CO.

An old man and his wife enter, and seem reading the signs all along a street; and the lady remarks, "What a splendid business must be done by Mr. Co, as his name appears upon so many signs."

NUN.

A tableau can be introduced here of the well-known scene of taking the veil.

DRUMS.

An irascible old bachelor, wishing to revenge himself upon a family, presents the six boys each with a drum. The effect of the instruments, played with vigor, generally satisfies the audience in a short time.

CONUNDRUMS.

A troupe of minstrels, who give and guess conundrums.

MARM.

A party of warriors enters in proud array. It is the eve of battle. Marmion addresses his troops, and is preparing to lead them forth to victory, when he remembers that his washing has not come, and that he must have a shirt-front done up immediately; and quotes the well known line,

"Their swords are ten thousand, their bosoms are one."

An Irish lad comes running in, and after hearing the demand, calls out, "Marm, marm, marm! here's a man who wants some washing done."

IRON.

The Irish woman is discovered ironing at a table. The shirt-bosom is ironed and laid on a chair. Loud noise is heard, and Chester enters, supporting Marmion in his arms, who waves above his head the fragment of his blade, shouting victory. The Irish woman demands payment for her work; but he puts her off, and continues his heroic utterances. She persists; and he exclaims, "Charge it to Chester. Charge, Chester, charge!" and expires.

DRAM.

An ARTIST, sitting by a table on which is an empty plate, a bottle, and a few brushes. Picture frames, and other furniture of a studio, are arranged around the room. He speaks in burlesque of Hamlet's soliloquy.

"To be or not to be," — life's dreary dream is o'er,
 And dark despair stands shuddering on the shore,
 Pointing in terror to that dreadful bourne
 From which, alas! there can be no return.
 Come then, dark dram of poison handy,
 Of strychnine made, called pure French brandy.
 Lift the black veil! thou dark and dreadful dram;
 Teach me what fate — what life is — what I am;
 And why this curse of genius has been given
 To crawl on earth and only dream of heaven:
 For round my mind the changing colors play
 Bright as the radiance of departing day;
 And forms of beauty ever fill my mind,
 Which to my canvas will not be confined —
 Bright fleeting visions which should trace my name
 With the great masters! But one moment stay!
 They had no names till they had passed away!
 And when, to-morrow, they will find me here,
 Will tardy fame mourn o'er my early bier,
 And glory toll my mournful funeral knell?
 What! no bread here? "Plate, oh, thou reasonest well."
[Drinks from the bottle. LADY enters, and knocks away the dram from his lips.]

LADY. — "What can have tempted you to this?"

ARTIST. — "Living in misery to dream of bliss;
 That which makes folly wise, and wisdom folly prove;
 The burning cold and freezing heat of love; —
 But you can make me happy! Let me trace
 The changing glories of that lovely face:
 The blush-rose mingling with the pure white lily."

LADY. — "To paint my face! How can you be so silly?"

ARTIST. — "Next week the dreadful critics come to see If to their clique I can admitted be.

Oh, let me paint that face which haunts me ever!
And if they don't pronounce the picture clever,
Othello's occupation's gone! and then
I never will attempt to paint again."

CURTAIN FALLS.

ATTIC.

The same room as before. One of the picture-frames is placed upon the table near the edge, the top of the frame leaning against the wall. A black shawl is pinned to the back edge of the frame, and the lady stands behind the table so as to show her head and shoulder in it, the rest of her body being concealed by the tables. Three critics enter, and express their disgust at being invited to such a miserable attic — as if any picture worth having could be produced in such a poor place. They then proceed to find fault with it in every way, criticising the drawing, color, &c. The lady keeps still as long as possible, then bows to them from the frame. The artist laughs at them, and the critics retire in confusion as the

CURTAIN FALLS.

DRAMATIC.

A manager sits at a small table at left of stage, and many applicants for engagements for the next dramatic season arrive, each one in turn giving a specimen of his powers. A tragedian, Irish, Dutch, comedian, ballet-dancer, and many others present themselves.

GAMES OF THOUGHT.

MANY persons enjoy a quiet game which taxes the thinking powers; and we offer here a few which will prove interesting to children, and which can be played in a manner hard enough to tax the brightest intellect. Of these none are better than the good old game of Throwing Light.

Some word must be chosen which has several meanings, such as deer, pen, post, mail, rail, oar, yarn. One player may conduct the game, or the company may be divided into sides. The leader talks fluently about the word, using it in as many meanings as possible, varying his conversation so as to confuse and mislead the guessers. I give a specimen of the manner in which one of the above words has been played by a Boston club, leaving the reader to guess which one is meant.

"Fixed and immovable, it sustains the swift messenger in its rapid course, and hinders slow travellers on their weary way. An emblem of dulness and stupidity, it spreads intelligence far and near. The lover longs for it with ardor; and the most stupid animals are attached to it also. Although very matter of fact, it is a creature of the imagination.

"One man is supported by it in time of weakness, while another is plunged into sorrow, or exalted to joy by its tidings. The real one is put to the meanest uses, while heroes gladly sacrifice their lives for the imaginary one. It cheers the sorrowing, sustains the weak, unnerves the strong, and holds a light to those in darkness, while the dull are bound to it by enduring ties. Welcomed at the doors of all, it seldom enters the houses of the poor; but no house can stand without it, and no country exists where it is not known. One brings another every day, and a man may be called by it, from it, to it, and pursue its imaginary existence even to death.

TWENTY QUESTIONS.

This is unlike the game of Throwing Light, for it depends wholly upon plain matter-of-fact replies to questions, without puns or any equivocation of fancy. The company must be divided into sides, each one of which selects a word to be guessed, and endeavors in turn to guess the word chosen by the other side. The most difficult word must be found, but it must be the name of some particular thing which is known to exist somewhere by both parties. Great care must be used by the guessing side not to waste questions, which must be used with care, as an account of them is always kept by the other. Any question may be used, except such as would have the name of the thing for the only true answer. Things thousands of miles away, of the most minute character, may often be guessed in five questions, after practice. Some persons have conducted this game who seldom had occasion to ask more than the following:

"To what kingdom does it belong? What is its size? shape? distance? and height from the ground?"

An umpire should be chosen to settle the disputes which often arise.

CARTOONS.

Each person draws a picture of some eventful scene, or in illustration of some line of poetry, or proverb. The drawing is passed in turn to each person, who guesses and writes its subject underneath. For pictures in illustration of this new and popular game, see "Our Young Folks' Magazine," for February, 1872.

THE MENTAL INDEX.

EACH player writes rapid replies to the following questions, as fast as they are read by the leader of the game :—

What do you most prefer?

What is your greatest aversion?

Which is your favorite author?

Which is your favorite character of fiction?

Which is your favorite character of history?

What quality would you most desire in a friend?

What is your favorite color?

What do you like best to eat?

When all have written, the leader reads the papers, and each one guesses the name of the writers.

CHARACTER.

One person leaves the room, and, during his absence, some personage of history and fiction is selected. They address the first player, upon his return, as if he were the person upon whom they have fixed, and he is to guess who it is by their remarks. The one by whose remark the name was guessed, must, in his turn, go out.

THE ARTIST.

Each player draws the head of some person, animal, bird, or fish, and turning down the paper, passes it to the next, who draws a body and passes it to a third, who finishes the picture, of course without knowing what has been done by his predecessors. On opening the paper a singular figure is the result.

MESMERISM.

One person goes out of the room ; the others decide upon some easy thing for him to do. He is led back blindfolded, and the players surround him, laying their hands upon him so that the finger-tips all touch him, the thumbs of both hands touching each other, and the little fingers touching those of the next players in the circle. When he is completely surrounded with hands, he is directed to divest his mind of thought as much as possible, while the other players fix their minds intently on the idea they have chosen. In most cases, after a few minutes, the player begins to move in the desired direction, and often performs the very act which he is willed to do.

DECLAMATION.

THE art of declaiming is one of the most important, and too often one of the most neglected branches of education. Although a couple of hours each week is devoted in common schools to this exercise it is too often a tedious and wearisome performance to teachers and scholars alike. In many families the demand for a new piece to speak is repeated each evening by the children, and the parents, after seeking until they are tired, to please their fastidious tastes, at last settle down in despair on some of the old poems which they learned in their youth, as their fathers did before them. These pieces, many of them grand in conception and well worthy of their enduring fame, have, by frequent repetition, grown so familiar and dull that the pupil cannot give them the expression which interest alone can impart. We have therefore collected from various sources a few original poems, all of which have been often copied and some of which have been spoken in schools, in the hope they may be found useful in the emergency referred to. The first one, "The Old Man's Will," is a true account of a noble charity founded by a gentleman who devoted the profits of a long life of economy and labor to the purpose of preventing poverty in the section it was intended to benefit. The fund has accumulated by judicious investment until its benefactions are of great and widespread utility. Two of the other poems are of a pathetic, and one of a humorous character, and all have the merit of originality if nothing more. They are modestly submitted to the rising generation, hoping they will speak for themselves if well spoken. The first requisite of a speaker as well as of an actor is, that every word should be carefully committed to memory. The teacher should enforce this rule with great care, as a slipshod manner of study is the fault of many beginners, and one that can seldom be remedied in after life. The necessity of having every word exactly correct should also be insisted upon, as it is an excellent discipline for the mind. If the pupil commits with difficulty let him learn but one verse at a lesson, but learn it letter perfect, which is a much better task than a dozen verses full of errors. Before speaking the pupil should bow gracefully to the audience and then stand erect, with shoulders thrown back, in order to give full effect to his voice. Every word should be enunciated in a clear and simple manner, to ensure which it is well to speak very slowly at first, until every separate sentence has been clearly uttered. Many orators who have studied this art can be distinctly heard at the end of the largest halls when speaking in their natural voice, when the words of a much louder declaimer would be inaudible. Gestures should be very few and full of expression, and only such as the sentiments of the piece naturally call forth. Repose of manner is far better than violent gesticulation, being much more effective, especially as too many gestures are apt to seem ridiculous when the speaker is of an excitable temperament. Much change of voice should be avoided, and any forced effects, but the spirit of the piece must be closely followed. The best way of doing this is to have the mind intent upon every word uttered, and good taste will dictate a suitable expression of it. Pathetic pieces are usually spoken rather slowly, humorous ones more rapidly, and patriotic ones louder and with spirit and dash. These little poems, as before mentioned, include specimens of the former styles, as the pupil will find patriotic ones in the many war lyrics produced during the times of struggle which inspired them. Most of these were written several years ago and are given as specimens of the pieces which are to be recited in a simple and natural manner.

THE OLD MAN'S WILL.

Old Oliver Smith, in his threadbare suit,
Hears the boys of the village laugh and hoot,
"There goes the miser, so poor and old,
Starving and scrimping to heap up gold."
But the old man thinks, with a quiet smile,
"Let these idle scoffers wait awhile,
Till time, which sifts the wheat from chaff,
May show that the poor have cause to laugh."
The old man goes to the promise sure,
"Who feeds the hungry and clothes the poor,
To the very least of them all, shall see
He has done it also unto me."

The years roll by and the will is read,
And blessings descend on the giver's head;
For many a farmer of wealth and skill
Owes his start in life to the old man's will.
It hears the orphaned children's cry,
And the blushing maiden's modest sigh;

And it smooths the poor man's dying bed,
For it gives to his starving children bread;
And it claims its share of the perfect bliss
Which crowns the lover's ecstatic kiss:
For it furnishes gold for the golden band
Which binds them together in heart and hand.
"God help the widow! so poor and old,"
And He does, from the miser's hoarded gold:
For His perfect love to the old man gave
Both the wish to give, and the power to save.

Ye sordid slaves of the shining pelf,
Who love the gold for its own poor self,
Who know that the cash you love so well
Is dragging you down to the depths of hell, —
If how to leave it you'd like to know,
Yet take it with you when you go,
To the bank which seven-fold interest pays,
Where no thieves can steal and no rust decays,
So that riches take wings and upward fly,
And the camel springs through the needle's eye, —
Go clothe the poor and the hungry fill,
And follow the text of the Old Man's Will!

SWEET-PEAS.

"Do you love the sweet-peas, grandpa?" my darling said to me,
As, holding up a bunch of them, she climbed upon my knee;
Her shining curls of tangled gold, all mingled with the gray,
As, nestling on my shoulder, her winsome forehead lay.
"Yes, I love them, little Mabel, for they always bring to me
Three pictures, which my old blurred eyes can never fail to see.

"A small brown cottage by the sea, with graceful vines o'errun,
In a quaint old-fashioned garden, all open to the sun,
Where she stood among the blossoms on a blessed summer day,
As graceful, sweet, and blushing, and as fresh and pure as they;
When the timid 'Yes' was spoken, and at once into it rolled
All the goodness and the virtue that my erring life could hold.
Then I thought I loved her truly, with my heart and soul and will;
But every day I've lived since then I've loved her better still.

"The tender fragrance of the flowers now hovers round the room;
But it cannot cheer the darkness sad, or dissipate the gloom,
Where calm and still, in perfect peace and purity, she lies,
My wife! my darling! all I have on earth to love and prize.

"All summer long the sweet sweet-peas luxuriantly will grow,
Regardless of the blessed one in dreamless sleep below;
In the rough old village graveyard, that I love with all my heart,
Too restful and too placid for the fuss of modern art,
There is room just close beside her, where I hope ere long to lie;"
But my baby darling whispers, "Dear grandpa, don't you cry!"

CONCORD, MASS., January, 1872.

CATCHING CUNNERS.

A breezy point far out at sea;
A fresh sou'-wester blowing free
Drives up the surf in a dashing swirl,
To kiss the feet of a lovely girl.
The violet shadow that seaward lies
Scarce rivals the hue of her dreamy eyes,
Which turn with a soft bewitching look
On a handsome youth as he baits her hook;
For with great good luck, on the coming tide,
They are sitting together, side by side,
Catching cunners.

The graceful kelp sways to and fro
As the white-capped rollers come and go,
And sweet sad thoughts of a buried past
O'er the young man's mind came thick and fast,
Of a love that cruelly hard had died,
In a bitter struggle of wounded pride,
When a year ago she had proved to be
As changeful and false as the sounding sea.
But he only says, with a glint of the eye,
"When the tide has turned it's useless to try Catching cunners."

EASTERN POINT, Summer of '71.

A COMMON CONTRAST.

On the Common, by the Frog-pond, a patient figure sits,
And all day long, through cloud and shine, her brow and stocking knits;
Happy to charm the cents away from some stray child of Eve;
Content if all the passers-by her tempting apples leave.

The pond, and sky above it, were blushing rosy red
In the glory of the sunset, when I saw the graceful head Of a winsome little beauty, with its crown of shining gold,
Bending across the basket to the one so gray and old.

Her dainty dress, from witching boot to tiny little glove,
Proclaimed her as the petted child of luxury and love,
And a bitter, bitter contrast to the worn and wrinkled dame;
But the sum of human happiness to all is much the same.

Fond hearts may break for your sweet sake, oh blue-eyed little dear,
And loving hands may from your path the briars and pitfalls clear;
But you must learn through pain and loss, "for 'tis the common fate," Life's hardest, brightest lesson, how to calmly trust and wait.

DAISY.

Darling! with the great brown eyes,
Brimming full of sweet surprise,
Fleecy floss of spun-gold hair,
Drifting over temples fair,
The golden summer seems to me
Fuller of grace for knowing thee.

Where the solemn mountains stand,
We climb together, hand in hand,
And the summer Sunday smiled
On the old, and little child, —

One bowed low by weary strife
Of a long and wasted life,
And the other fresh and fair,
And pure as this delicious air.

Rippling laughter, soft and low,
Rises from the porch below,
Where fair brunette and lovely blonde
Have drawn a charmed circle fond
Of friends and lovers to their feet,
By winning smiles and voices sweet, —
Many an aching heart may know
Sorrow and love together go;
But our love, my baby friend!
Knows no sting or dreary end;
Perfect trust in true love lies Mirrored in your lovely eyes.

Nothing in this wondrous view,
Can compare, my pet! with you;
Graceful ferns bend low to brush
Your cunning coat of bright blue plush;
Wide-eyed daisies envious stare
At the ones that kiss your hair,
Nodding from the graceful brim
Of the saucy hat they trim.

STOWE, VT., Summer of 1870.

THE LITTLE HOUSE.

A little house of modest brown
Stands close by the church, in a pleasant town,
Where early and late, all the summer day,
A dreamy organist comes to play;
And through the house and its garden round,
The softened notes of the organ sound;

Through the open window they gently steal,
To chant their grace at the morning meal;
Then float away on the early breeze,
Where the hammock swings from the apple-trees,
Through the bending corn, whose green leaves glisten
As with all its ears it tries to listen,
And the lovely children pause in play
To hear the sweet notes die away, —
Away they go, for they cannot stop
To furnish music for the hop,
Where the morning glories in round dance twine;
But they sound through the gorgeous trumpet vine,
And set the dahlias all aglow
By kissing the mignonette below.
They welcome the Father home at night
To the pleasant porch with its faces bright,
Where the beautiful Mother, the soul of home,
And the brown-eyed children at sunset come;
And a graceful maiden, with wondrous hair,
And soft blue eyes, sits dreaming there
Of the mighty discords, and chords of life,
And the perfect harmony, after the strife:
And the notes of the organ rise and fall
In sweet benediction above them all.

GOLDEN ROD.

A SKETCH IN COLORS.

Through a tangled thicket of golden rod,
A lovely maiden at sunset trod;
With her bright red skirt, and her sack of blue,
And curls with the gold glints gleaming through.
Like a cameo cut on a rosy shell,
Her perfect profile stands out well

On the glowing west, as she turns to see
The radiant splendor of shrub and tree,
All flaunting their banners of gold and red,
To show that the beautiful summer is dead.
Across the hills on the distant bay
A fleet of fishermen anchored lay,
Their torn sails gleaming pure and white,
Like most men's lives to the distant sight.
One of Indian Summer's most perfect days
Is flooding the earth with its golden haze;
And the maiden's mind, with a sweet day dream,
As bright as the blossoms that round her gleam.

SOCIAL AMUSEMENTS;

OR, FULL DIRECTIONS FOR A HALL ENTERTAINMENT, AND HOW TO PREPARE IT IN ANY CITY OR VILLAGE.

THE importance of having a good time is too much neglected in the hurry of the busy world; everything is therefore a real blessing which promotes sensible enjoyment, and does good at the same time by cultivating the thinking powers, and developing a taste for art while it earns money for charitable purposes.

In every village of our land talent lies dormant, and beauty, wit and grace need only organization to form a most attractive entertainment, which, besides being profitable, will do more to promote social intercourse than a hundred formal meetings. In many towns ladies and gentlemen from the different churches unite each season to help each other. At a beautiful village on the Hudson a Unitarian Society numbering only six young ladies among its members, has for two successive seasons cleared five hundred dollars in this way by three days of easy and pleasant work. The pastor of a church of a different denomination said, at the close of one of these festivals, "Three days ago these ladies passed one another on the street without bowing, and now they borrow each other's finery with the freedom of old friends."

Many energetic persons work hard to little purpose in this direction because they do not know how to begin, and for their assistance it is proposed to give plain directions for producing a performance which has cleared thousands of dollars this season for charitable purposes.

At the first meeting the following officers should be chosen, none of whom should be performers: a business manager, to attend to the advertising, sale of tickets and engaging the hall, door-keepers, ushers and orchestra; the property man, who prepares all the furniture and small articles, and sees that everything is in its proper place for each scene; the stage manager, who has absolute control behind the curtain, and attends to the choice of programme, distribution of parts and grouping of the scenes, as well as to the scenery and lights. Two ladies of taste as costumers should also be selected to see that each one is tastefully dressed and ready at the moment the scene is called, as delays are dangerous, and there is no excuse for them, as in no case should the audience be compelled to wait over five minutes for any change.

The next step is the distribution of parts, in which all jealousy and ill-feeling can be prevented by arranging the ladies in groups according to the style of complexion.

The best number for an elaborate performance is five blondes, six dark or oriental, three large for statues, six for court ladies, six with some comic talent for pantomime, also four gentlemen for pantomime, two for boatmen, two for court scenes, one child for statuary, one for Cupid and one for court scenes. The first meeting can be in any room, and two rehearsals upon the stage will be enough, unless elaborate pantomime and plays are used, which must of course be committed to memory first, as it is worse than useless to rehearse them until every part has been perfectly learned.

Every large town is now provided with scenery, but if none is available it is better to use simple black drapery than to attempt making any. A platform four feet high and three feet wide should be placed across the rear of the stage, and a frame seven feet high by five feet wide, made of six-inch pine board covered with gold paper, should be supported on upright posts in the centre of this platform. A curtain of black cambric with dull side out should cover the whole back of the stage, drawing in the centre to close in around the frame when open, and to form a background for the statuary when drawn, and another curtain must also be hung behind the frame.

In front of this permanent platform a temporary one is made of three tables, about two feet wide and three feet long, placed lengthwise, with a space of ten inches between the first and second. These are draped with white cotton sheets for statuary pedestals, and serve also for the deck of the boat, which is made in profile with a high prow and covered with gold paper with black stripes drawn upon it. It is kept in an upright position by leaning against the tables; and boxes two feet high, covered with bright drapery, are placed at the prow, stern and centre upon the tables. To make the plan clear, it will be best to describe several scenes exactly as they should be presented, giving costumes, properties, scenery, lights, etc., for each. The performers are arranged in groups as above, the blondes in white muslin dresses made as simply as possible, with full waist and angel sleeves; the orientals in bright skirts, sleeveless jackets or drapery of crape shawls, with turbans upon their heads, gold paper bracelets and chains, with all the showy ornaments possible on the front of the dress. The ladies of the pantomime all wear quaint calico dresses, with old-fashioned bonnets, hats and cloaks. The court ladies in silk train dresses with powdered hair, and the statues with classic drapery of cotton sheets, with faces covered with chalk, and white gloves sewed on to stocking-legs upon their hands and arms. One court gentleman in showy velvet robe, and one in a cavalier dress with cape. The boatmen in flannel shirts, dark pantaloons and high boots. One fop and one old man, and the others according to the parts they fill in various pantomimes.

The general dress described above is the one in which they all appear at first, and most of the second costumes are so arranged that they can be put on over the other with very little trouble, and when any change is called for, it will be described in its place in the scene. During the overture the statues stand at the left upper entrance, all the other performers stand upon the right of the stage out of sight, while the first scene is ready to be shown at the rising of the curtain.

THE PROGRESS OF MUSIC.—The tallest blonde stands at the prow of the boat, holding a long trumpet; next another stands on the floor between the tables, holding an oar; a lovely blonde with a pretty Cupid by her side kneels at a golden harp; the fourth sits with a lyre at the stern, and the fifth stands upon a box above her with a tamborine. The group is changed in the second scene by the Cupid being discovered kissing the harpist, thus creating evident discord among the players. Each one wears a scarf of cambric, of a different color, which is covered with gold paper cut in lace pattern, and is fastened on the right shoulder and falls to the feet. The boat is then taken away, and the pedestals are thus ready for the statues, who form a MONUMENTAL GROUP, as follows: Faith leans upon a cross at the right. Glory stands in the centre, with uplifted wreath, and History sits at the left with book and pen, with the child looking over her shoulder; all must keep their eyes shut; the pedestals are covered with cloth; the music is sad, and a green light is used. Next the orientals appear in the scene entitled opposite her on the left; another sits on a box on the right of centre, while a venerable harper in black occupies the centre. At first all look sad and hold their instruments listlessly. Next all seem to be playing, and assume the most animated attitudes. The light should be white and the music sad. The properties used are cut from sheet iron and covered with gold paper. The statues next appear in

BY THE WATERS OF BABYLON.—The tallest one, holding cymbals, stands on the right end of the tables, the shortest kneels, leaning against her with guitar; another cymbal player stands on the stage at right, with a tamborine player

THE ANGEL OF SLEEP.—The tallest one, wearing large wings, bends over another who holds a child in her arms. The boat and water strip are next brought in again, and four court ladies. The two boatmen and the Doge of Venice form the scene entitled

THE BRIDAL OF THE SEA.—At the prow a pretty child points out some object in the distance to a lady who stands with her; a second lady has her right hand on the shoulder of the Doge, who is in the act of dropping a ring into the water; one lady is sitting, and another is standing witnessing the ceremony; one boatman holds the oar, another the rudder of the boat; a concealed choir sing "Beautiful Venice, the Bride of the Sea." For the above scenes a horizon scene alternates with the black curtain, but now this curtain is drawn away and the frame exposed in which the picture of HAGAR is represented by the largest of the orientals; at her feet lies Ishmael, dressed in a loose white robe, and the tallest blonde, wearing a pair of wings, bends over them. Hagar is praying and the angel points upward with her right hand. The light must come from the top and one side, and be white. Next the pantomime ladies enact

TOO LATE FOR THE STAGE.—At the head of the line an old lady grasps the arm of an old man who stands with uplifted umbrella; five others follow in line, each one bearing a band-box in one hand, and a bundle, bag or bird-cage in the other; all look eagerly forward, then beckon vigorously, and finally rush out frantically in pursuit. The scene is a wood and the music lively. In the meantime the frame has been filled by two court ladies, one holding a casket of jewels, which she seems to be showing to the other, who kneels beside her. The name of the picture is THE FAMILY JEWELS, and the light is the same as on the first picture.

HERMIONE, OR THE LIVING STATUE, is next shown; the statue stands upon a draped table in the centre of the stage against the black curtains; all the court ladies and gentlemen are grouped around in a semi-circle; at a given signal the statue moves very slowly, first raising her hand, and then spreading her arms, at which the gentleman on the right moves forward as if receiving her in his arms. Another picture can then be ready.

"THE CHOCOLATE GIRL" is too well known to need description.

The pantomime actors will now be ready, by taking off their wraps, to appear in WASHING DAY; one stands at a wash-tub in the centre, another at a churn. At a spinning-wheel in the corner sits an old woman, an old man tends a baby, and a girl is sawing wood at the left side. The scene is a kitchen, and "Yankee Doodle" is played, at first very slowly and then faster and faster, and the characters keep time with the music until they get into very rapid motion. While this scene is going on in the front part of the stage, the tables and boat can be re-arranged, and THE RETURN FROM THE HARVEST shown by the orientals, who have had time to change their dresses to appear as Roman girls, with a flat white cap, with white waist and bodice, and a long white apron ornamented with strips of cloth of various colors sewed across it. In the centre a youth without a coat, in knee-breeches with bright stockings, is lifting a large basket on to the head of a maiden who stands in the centre; at the prow another lady stands, leaning on a sheaf of wheat; at the stern a third holds a huge apple away from a little boy who reaches for it, and a boatman with red cap stands at the oar, while a girl holding a rake sits on the side of the boat as if she had just jumped on. The scene is a horizon, and the singers chant a harvest home; the light is first white, then red.

An illustrated poem, "THE SCULPTOR BOY," by Bishop Doane, may next be shown, in which a statue stands in a box two feet wide by three feet high, from which the corner and the end have been removed, and the front covered with white cotton cloth to produce the effect of a partly finished statue. The boy, with upraised mallet, is about to strike the chisel, which is placed upon the shoulder of the statue. At the word "angel vision," the scene, which must represent a plain room, is opened, and three blondes are discovered, wearing wings and grouped around a tall cross. They stand upon the tables, and are shown in a red light, against a black curtain.

Next, a scene from Dickens may be presented, for which it will be well to refer to Professor Fette's excellent "Dialogues from Dickens," which contains full directions for preparing them.

A very good closing scene for this performance is called "BEHIND THE SCENES," upon which the curtain is supposed to have risen by accident, and all the performers, dressed in the costume in which they last appeared, are grouped around in wild confusion. Statues, pantomimists, court ladies and orientals, all together, seem discussing the performance. The properties are piled in a heap, and parts of several different pieces of scenery are shown. In the second scene they all sing in chorus as the curtain falls.

As the light is of the utmost importance, it is best to devote a little space to a description of the proper methods of arranging and controlling it. Every stage is fitted with at least three rows of border-lights, which cross the stage on the top, and with one row of foot-lights, which must act independently of each other. For all pantomimes, plays, etc., which occupy the whole or front half of the stage, all these lights should be burning in full. When the picture frame is used the foot-lights must be turned down one-half, and the border lights should be full. When colored lights are used, turn down all the stage lights slowly, in order to bring out the colors by degrees. The best colored lights can be obtained in all shades by an order sent to HAPPY HOURS COMPANY, New York, or a head-light of a locomotive may be used, placed at the right of the stage ten feet from the frame in an oblique direction, so as to be concealed from the view of the audience by the side scenes. Sheets of green, orange and red glass, sixteen inches square, must be placed in the centre of a wooden frame large enough to cover the opening of the lamp, so that no light can escape without passing through the colored glass. By the white light is meant that no colored shade is placed in front of the lamp. The top light is indispensable, and it can be easily arranged by any gas-fitter, but in case there is no gas in the hall, a row of large kerosene lamps must be placed above the front of the stage with a sheet of tin behind each, to throw the light down upon the frames.

PRIVATE THEATRICALS.

PRIVATE THEATRICALS do not, as a rule, draw as good houses as formerly, since so many poor performances have been given, and so many people have been willing to insult an audience and write themselves dull by coming upon the stage without a perfect knowledge of their parts. "Learn well your part, there all the honor lies," should be the maxim of every aspirant for dramatic fame. No genius will atone for want of study, and every author knows the words in which he wishes to express his thoughts far better than the actor who mars them by interpolations and omissions. Do not undertake more than you can perform. In the words of one of the most gifted amateurs, it requires a lifetime to learn what you cannot do. It is therefore best to undertake the simplest pieces, and those which require natural expressions of humor. The smaller and more remote the village the more difficult plays they seem to undertake. Some one has said that "the actor never lived who thought he could not play Hamlet," and in proof of it, comedies, and even tragedies which task the utmost resources of the greatest theatres, have been attempted by amateurs in little village halls. It is best to select domestic dramas or light pieces, which, if thoroughly learned and naturally acted, amuse actors and audience in the highest degree, as well as give ease of bearing and strengthen the memory.

The cast of the plays is harder than that of the still scenes, as it is much harder to classify talent than personal appearance. The manager has need of rare tact to keep the performers all in good humor, unless all unite to work for the general good, without envy and in perfect harmony. After a little practice a company soon settles down to work and all find their fixed places as heavy fathers, leading juveniles, or eccentric comedians.

We add the names of many plays which are often used by these companies, and a full catalogue will be sent at any time on application to HAPPY HOURS COMPANY, of whom any play published in the world can be procured.

LIST OF PLAYS SUITABLE FOR PRIVATE PERFORMANCES,

Any of which will be mailed on receipt of the price (15 cents each), by HAPPY HOURS COMPANY, Publishers, New York.

Advice Gratis.—A Farce in 1 Act. By CHARLES DANCE. 4 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, square cut coats, knee breeches, silk stockings, pumps, livery. Scene, a well-furnished apartment. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Afloat and Ashore.—A Burlesque Maritime Drama in 3 Acts. 3 Male and three Female characters. Costumes, burlesque midshipman and sailors and modern. Scenes, a drawing-room, deck of a vessel and an island. Time of representation, forty-five minutes.

All in der Family.—A Dutch Sketch in 1 Act. By McDERMOTT and TRUMBLE. 4 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, ad libitum. Scene, exterior and interior. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp.—A Drama of ups and downs, for young ladies and gentlemen, in 2 Acts. 6 Male and 3 Female characters. Mandarin, ladies in waiting, maids of honor, ushers, guards, gamins, etc. Costumes elaborate. Scenes, interiors and exteriors. Time of representation, one hour.

Among the Breakers.—A Drama in 2 Acts. Simple cottage or hut interior for both Acts. 6 Male, 4 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Time of representation, one hour and a half.

Another Glass.—A Drama in 1 Act. By THOMAS MORTON. 6 Male, 3 Female characters. Costumes, English; modern. A very effective temperance play. Scenery necessary. Time of representation, one hour.

Antony and Cleopatra Married and Settled.—A Burletta in one Act. By CHARLES SELBY. 1 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes gay, rather loud dress, cavalry dress, powdered wig for Antony; light cotton dress, fashionable male costume and Debardeurs dress for Cleopatra. Scene, interior of a shop (tailors and bonnet makers). This is a roaring, rollicking Farce and ends with a burlesque dance. Time of representation, forty-five minutes.

Anything for a Change.—A Petite Comedy in 1 Act. By SHIRLEY BROOKS. 3 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, present day. Scene, an interior. Time of representation, fifty-one minutes.

Apple Blossoms.—A Comedy in 3 Acts. By JAMES ALBERY. 7 Male and 3 Female characters. A pleasing piece, with rich part for an eccentric comedian. Costumes, modern English. Scenery, exterior and interior of inn. Time of representation, two hours and twenty minutes.

Arca Belle (The).—A Farce in 1 Act. By WILLIAM BROUGH and ANDREW HALLIDAY. 3 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes of the present time, and scene a kitchen. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Ask No Questions.—A Burletta in 2 Acts. By CHARLES SELBY. 7 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes and scenes (interior and exterior) very elaborate. Time of representation, one hour and twenty-five minutes.

Atchi.—A Comedietta in 1 Act. By JOHN MADDISON MORTON. 3 Male and 2 Female characters. A gem in pleasantry, whose conclusion is irresistibly comic. Costumes of the day. Scene, a tastefully laid out garden. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Aunt Charlotte's Maid.—A Farce in 1 Act. By J. MADDISON MORTON. 3 Male and 3 Female characters. One of the best of this prolific humorist's dramatic pieces. Dresses of the period, and scene an apartment in a dwelling house. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Bardell vs. Pickwick.—A Farceical Sketch in 1 Act. Arranged from CHARLES DICKENS. 6 Male and 2 Female characters. Uncommonly funny. Affords good chance to "take off" local legal celebrities. Costumes, modern. Scene, a court-room. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Beautiful Forever.—A Farce in 1 Act. By FREDERICK HAY. 2 Male and 2 Female characters. A sprightly satirical rebuke to those that patronize advertised nostrums. Costumes of the day. Scene, a handsome interior. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Bells (The); or, the Polish Jew.—A romantic moral Drama in 3 Acts. By M. M. ERCKMANN and CHATRAIN. 9 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, Alsatian, of present date. Scenery, two interiors and a court-room. Time of representation, two hours and twenty minutes.

Big Banana (The).—A comic Musical Sketch. By ALFRED B. SEDGWICK. In 1 Act. 1 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, German emigrant. Scene, exterior. Dialogue, songs and music. Time of representation, fifteen minutes.

Black Sheep.—A Drama in 3 Acts. From EDMUND YATES' novel of the same name, and arranged for the stage by J. PALGRAVE SIMPSON and the author. 7 Male and 5 Female characters. Costumes of the present time. Scenery, an interior; gardens at Homburg, and a handsome parlor. Time of representation, two and a half hours.

Blow for Blow.—A Drama in a Prologue and 3 Acts. By HENRY J. BYRON. 11 Male and 6 Female characters. Full of homely pathos as well as rich humor. Has several excellent parts. Costumes, modern. Scenery, interiors of offices and dwellings. Time of representation, three hours.

Blue Beard; or, Female Curiosity.—A Sensation Drama in 2 acts. 6 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, Turkish. Scene, a room in Blue Beard's castle. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Boarding School (The).—A Farce in 1 Act. By W. B. BERNARD. 7 Male and 5 Female characters and scholars. Costumes, military and modern. Scenes, exterior and interior. Time of representation, one hour.

Boston Dip (The).—A Comedietta in 1 Act, for 4 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, modern evening dress. Time of representation, about thirty minutes.

Bread on the Waters.—A Drama in 2 Acts. 5 Male, 3 Female characters. Old man, eccentric old man, leading juvenile man, light comedy villain, low comedian, old woman, walking lady and leading part; child in 1st Act, young lady in 2d. Time of representation, one hour and thirty minutes.

Breach of Promise (A).—An extravagant Comic Drama in 2 Acts. By T. W. ROBERTSON. 5 Male, 2 Female characters. A capital, very merry piece. Good for amateurs. Time of representation, one hour. Scenery, two interiors. Costumes, modern.

Broken-Hearted Club (The).—A Comedietta. By J. STERLING COYNE. 4 Male and 8 Female characters. A laughable satire on the Women's Rights movement. Costumes, modern English. Scenery, a drawing-room. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Cabin Boy (The).—A Drama in 2 Acts. By EDWARD STERLING. 10 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, French uniform, sailors, Spanish American Slaves dress. 2 Scenes, interiors, open at the back and showing the sea. Time of representation, one hour and fifteen minutes. Julian (The "Cabin Boy") was one of Mm. Celeste's great characters, and can be made very effective.

Cabman No. 93; or, Found in a Four Wheeler.—A Farce in 1 Act. By THOMAS J. WILLIAMS. 2 Male and 2 Female characters. A ludicrous piece, with a cabman for the first low comedian, and a stock-broker as eccentric character part. Costumes of present day. Scene, a furnished room. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Caste.—An original Comedy in 3 Acts. By T. W. ROBERTSON. A lively and effective satire upon the times, played successfully in America at Wallack's. 5 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scenery, the 1st and 3d Acts, interior of a neat room; the 2d a fashionable room. Time of representation, two hours and forty minutes.

Caught by the Cuff.—A farce in 1 Act. By FREDERICK HAY. 4 Male and 1 Female characters. An exquisitely ludicrous production, crammed with situations. Costumes of the day. Scene, a kitchen. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Caught in His Own Tolls.—A Farce in 1 Act. 5 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, knee breeches, plaid trousers, loud waistcoat, gaiters, very thick shoes, gardener's apron, night dress, large slippers, short muslin dress. Scene, a garden. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Charity.—A Play in 4 Acts. By W. S. GILBERT. 9 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scenes, a boudoir, a drawing-room, a morning room and library. Time of representation, two hours and fifteen minutes. An excellent play for private performance. "Ruth Tredgett" is one of Fanny Davenport's greatest characters.

Champion of Her Sex.—A Farce. Female characters only. 8 characters, including two Irish girls and eccentric old lady. Plain scene. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Charming Pair (A).—A Farce in 1 Act. By THOMAS J. WILLIAMS. 4 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes of the present day. Scene, a handsomely furnished apartment. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Checkmate.—A Comedy in 2 Acts. By ANDREW HALLIDAY. 6 Male and 5 Female characters. Costumes, English, of the present day. Scenes, interior of a country hotel, and exterior of same, with landscape. Time of representation, one hour and a half.

Chops of the Channel (The).—An original Nautical Farce in 1 Act. By FREDERICK HAY. 3 Male and 2 Female characters. A very mirth exciting and whimsical composition. Costumes of the present day. Scene, the saloon of a steamer. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Close Shave (A).—A Farce in 1 Scene. 6 Male characters. Walking gent, eccentric old man, Irishman, Negro, fop and utility. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Coals of Fire.—Six Male characters. Eccentric old man, walking gentleman, three school-boys, and an Irishman. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Cousin Florence.—A Comedietta in 2 Acts. 4 Male and 7 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, a morning room. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Cupboard Love.—A Farce in 1 Act. By FREDERICK HAY. 2 Male and 1 Female characters. A good specimen of broad comedy. Dresses modern, and scene, a neatly furnished apartment. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Cupid's Eye-Glass.—A Comedy in 1 Act. By THOMAS PICTON. 1 Male and 1 Female characters. Adapted for amateur performance. Costumes of the day, and scene, a drawing-room. Time of representation, twenty-five minutes.

Cup of Tea (A).—A Comedietta in 1 Act. Translated from the French of "Une Tasse de Thé," by CHARLES NUTTIER and J. DERLEY. 3 Male and 1 Female characters. An exquisite petty comedy, well adapted for amateur representation. Costumes, modern. Scene, handsome drawing-room. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Cut Off With a Shilling.—A Comedietta in 1 Act. By S. THEYRE SMITH. 2 Male and 1 Female characters. Scene, a drawing-room. Time of representation, twenty-five minutes.

Cyril's Success.—A Comedy in 5 Acts. By HENRY J. BYRON. 10 Male and 4 female characters. Costumes, modern. Scenery, four interiors. Time of representation, three hours and twenty minutes.

Daddy Gray.—A Serio-comic Drama in 3 Acts. By ANDREW HALLIDAY. 8 Male and 4 Female characters. One of the author's most effective and natural compositions. Dresses of the present day. Scenery, interior of a cottage, a lawyer's office, street and archway and cottage, with landscape. Time of representation, two hours.

Dandelion's Dodges.—A Farce in 1 Act. By THOMAS J. WILLIAMS. 4 Male and 2 Female characters. A rattling piece. The part of Dandelion excellent for a low comedian. Costumes of the day. Scenery, a picturesque landscape. Time of representation, fifty minutes.

Dancing Barber (The).—A Farce in 1 Act. By CHARLES SELBY. 7 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, fashionable evening, old man's, tights, pumps, silk stockings, powdered hair and modern. Scenes, a plain room and handsome drawing-room. Time of representation, one hour.

Dark Deeds.—A Burlesque Sensational Play in 3 Acts. 2 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, a drawing room. Time of representation, twenty-five minutes.

David Garrick.—A Comedy in 3 Acts. By T. W. ROBERTSON. 8 Male and 3 Female characters. Most effectively performed by Mr. Sothorn in England and in America with decided success. Costumes, court dresses. Scenery, two interiors antiques furnished. Time of representation, one hour and three-quarters.

Dearest Mamma.—A Comedietta in 1 Act. By WALTER GORDON. 4 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, modern and scene, a drawing-room. Time of representation, one hour.

Dearer than Life.—A Serio-comic Drama in 3 Acts. By HENRY J. BYRON. 6 Male and 5 Female characters. An effective piece, which could be readily performed by amateurs with success. Costumes, English of the day. Scenery, two interiors, easily arranged. Time of representation, two hours.

Decree of Divorce (The).—A Musical Sketch in 1 Act. By ALFRED B. SEDGWICK. 2 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, village peasants of the time of the French Revolution, 1798. Scene, a village in France. Dialogue, songs and music. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Deeds of Dreadful Note.—A Dramatic Tale of Terror in 1 Act. By ALFRED DUBOIS. 6 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, Newmarket coat, white cord breeches, top boots, Hessian boots, green coat and gilt buttons, flowered vest, judges, brigands, policemen, short frilled nightgown and cap. Scene, a garret with window at back opening on a roof. Time of representation, one hour. This is a roaring farce.

Doing for the Best.—A Domestic Drama in 2 Acts. By M. ROPHINO LACY. 5 Male and 3 Female characters. An effective acting piece, popular in London. Costumes of the day. Two scenes, one interior of cottage, the other a drawing-room. Time of representation, one hour and a half.

Dollars and Cents.—An original American Comedy in 3 Acts. By L. J. HOLLENIUS, as performed by the Murray Hill Dramatic Association. 9 Male and 4 Female characters. Costumes modern, and scenery, three interiors and one garden. Time of representation, two and three-quarter hours.

Dot Mad Tog.—A Dutch Sketch in 1 Act. By McDERMOTT and TRUMBLE. 2 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, modern, German emigrant. Scene, a kitchen. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Dot Madrimonial Advertisement.—A Dutch Sketch in 1 Act. By McDERMOTT and TRUMBLE. 5 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes ad libitum. Scene, a room with table set for breakfast. Time of representation, twenty-five minutes.

Dot Quied Lotgings.—A Dutch and Irish Sketch in 1 Act. By McDERMOTT and TRUMBLE. 5 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes ad libitum. Scene, a room plainly furnished. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Down by the Sea.—A Drama in 2 Acts. 6 Male, 3 Female characters. Two old men, juvenile man, low comedian, dandy, Frenchman, old woman, walking lady and soubrette. Time of representation, one hour and twenty minutes.

Drop Too Much (A).—A Farce in 1 Scene. 4 Male, 2 Female characters. Two Yankees, Irishman, walking gent, old woman and Yankee girl. Temperance farce. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Duchess of Dublin (The).—A Farce. 6 Male, 4 Female characters. Costumes modern. Scene, plain. Time of representation, about thirty minutes.

Dutchman in Ireland.—A Comic Sketch in 1 Act. 3 Male characters (1 Dutch and 2 Irish, 1 disguised as an old woman). Costumes, semi-military for HANS, tattered and patched for GERALD, and chintz bed-gown and patched petticoat for PHELIN. Scene, interior of a ruined house. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Easy Shaving.—A Farce in 1 Act. By F. C. BURNAND and MONTAGUE WILLIAMS. 5 Male and 2 Female characters. A neat and effective piece, with excellent parts for low comedian and singing chambermaid. Costumes of the days of Charles II of England. Scene, a barber's shop. Time of representation, twenty-five minutes.

East Lynne.—A Drama in 5 Acts. (Adapted from MRS. HENRY WOOD's novel). 8 Male, 7 Female characters. Scenes, chambers and landscapes. Costumes, modern. This piece has been performed throughout the United States by Mrs. D. P. Bowers, Miss Lucille Western and other well-known stars. Time of representation, three hours.

Eligible Situation (An). An Eccentricity in 1 Act. By T. ARCHER and J. C. BROUGH. 3 Male and 6 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, a drawing-room. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Enlisted for the War; or, The Home Guard.—A Patriotic Drama in 3 Acts, founded on the late rebellion. So constructed that it can be played in 2 Acts by the omission of the 2d. 7 Male, 3 Female characters. Males: juvenile hero, eccentric old man, light comedy, villain; low comedy part—negro and military characters. Females: light comedy—old lady and walking lady. Scenes easily arranged. Time of representation, about two hours.

Everybody's Friend.—A comedy in 3 Acts. By J. STERLING COYNE. 6 Male and 5 Female characters. Costumes, modern, and scenery 3 interiors. Time of representation, two and a half hours.

Fast Family (The). A Comedy in 4 Acts. By B. WEBSTER, JR. 11 Male and 7 Female characters. Costumes, modern and fashionable. Scenes, interiors well furnished. Time of representation, three hours. An excellent play for private performance.

Family Pride.—A Comedy in 5 Acts. By R. SULLIVAN. 6 Male and 4 Female characters. Costumes, modern, fashionable, fancy and livery. Scenes, a handsomely furnished drawing-room, a saloon, richly furnished, with large old-fashioned family pictures; a drawing-room, well furnished, backed by a conservatory; an oak lobby. Time of representation, two hours and thirty-five minutes.

Fairy Freaks.—A Fantastic Play in 3 Acts. 2 Male and 6 Female characters. Costumes, fairy, of burlesque character. Scene, exterior and interior. Time of representation, twenty-five minutes.

Fearful Tragedy in the Seven Dials (A).—A Farceical Interlude in 1 Act. By CHARLES SELBY. 4 Male and 1 Female characters. A very laughable piece, easily produced; certain to bring down the house. Costumes of the day. Scene, a genteelly furnished bed-room. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Fernande; or, Forgive and Forget.—A Drama in 3 Acts. By VICTORIEN SARDOU. 11 Male and 10 Female characters. This is a correct version of the celebrated play as performed in Paris and adapted to the English stage by Henry L. Williams, Jr. Costumes, modern French. Scenery, four interiors. Time of representation, three hours.

Fifth Wheel (The).—A Comedy in 3 Acts. 10 Male and 2 Female characters. An excellent American production, easily managed. Costumes, modern. Scenery not complicated. Time of representation, about one hour and three-quarters.

Fireside Diplomacy.—A Comedietta in 1 Act. By CHAS. S. CHELTNAM. 2 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, a drawing-room elegantly furnished. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

First Love.—A Comedy in 1 Act. By EUGENE SCRIBE. Adapted to the American stage by L. J. HOLLENIUS. 4 Male and 1 Female characters. Suitable for amateurs. Modern costumes, and scene, a parlor. Time of representation, forty-five minutes.

Foiled; or, a Struggle for Life and Liberty.—A Drama in 4 Acts. By O. W. CORNISH. 9 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scenery, a variety of scenes required, but none elaborate. Time of representation, three and a half hours.

Founded on Facts.—A Farce in 1 Act. By J. P. WOOLER. 4 Male and 2 Female characters. A favorite acting piece, easily put on the stage and never failing in success. Costumes of the present day. Scene, a hotel parlor. Time of representation, thirty-five minutes.

Freedom of the Press.—A Farce in one Scene. 8 Male characters. Walking gent, 4 eccentric Irishmen, Yankee, stage-struck printer's devil. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Frog Prince (The).—A Fairy Play in 1 Act. 2 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, doublet, hose, puffed breeches, Spanish cloak, regal robes, long mantle and train, etc. Scene, a wood and apartment in a palace. This is better with scenery as described, but can be easily arranged for a parlor performance. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Game of Billiards (A).—A Temperance Sketch in 1 Act. By McDERMOTT and TRUMBLE. 1 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, easy. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Garrikk Fever (The).—A Farce in 1 Act. By J. R. PLANCHE. 7 Male and 4 Female characters. Costumes of the year 1742—court dresses, regimentals, velvet trains, etc. Scenery, a plain interior. Time of representation, forty-five minutes.

Gay Old Man Am I (A).—A Musical Monologue. By ALFRED B. SEDGWICK. 1 Male character. Costume, an old fop. Scene, a street. This is a short speaking part with two songs and the music. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Gentlemen of the Jury.—Farce for 12 Male characters. Scene, plain room. Costumes, modern. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Girls of the Period (The).—A Comedietta in 1 Act. 4 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, a drawing-room. Time of representation, twenty-five minutes.

Goose with the Golden Eggs (The).—A Farce in 1 Act. By AUGUSTUS MAYHEW and SUTHERLAND EDWARDS. 5 Male and 3 Female characters. Gay, rollicking, full of incessant action, having three of the most comical characters imaginable. Costumes of the present period. Scene, a lawyer's office. Time of representation, forty-five minutes.

Go to Putney.—A Farce in 1 Act. By HARRY LEMON. 4 Male and 3 Female characters. Excellent for amateurs. Costumes of the day. Scene, a drawing-room. Time of representation, forty-five minutes.

Great Elixir (The).—A Farce in 1 Scene. 9 Male characters, including eccentric comedy, Irishman, two walking gents, deaf man, nervous gent. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Greatest Plague in Life (The).—A Farce in 1 Scene. 8 Female characters, including old lady, Irish girl and Yankee girl. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Grecian Bend (The).—A Farce in 1 Scene. 7 Female characters, including old lady, Irish girl and school-girls with disguises. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Gray Mare (A).—A Comedietta in 1 Act. By B. WEBSTER, JR. 2 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, simple. Scene, a well-furnished room. Time of representation, one hour.

Happy Dispatch (The).—A Japanese Opera Bouffe in 1 Act. By ALFRED THOMPSON. 3 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, more or less Japanese. Scene, a Japanese shop. This can be very easily arranged in a parlor. Dialogues, songs, choruses and dance. Very funny. Time of representation, forty-five minutes.

Happy Pair (A).—A Comedietta in 1 Act. By S. THEYRE SMITH. 1 Male and 1 Female character. A neat Dramatic Sketch of a conjugal misunderstanding. Modern dresses. Scene, a drawing-room. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Hard Case (A).—A Farce in 1 Act. By THOMAS PICTON. 2 Male characters. A most ludicrous piece for 2 performers. Costumes of the day. Scene, an interior. Time of representation, thirty-five minutes.

Harlequin! Little Red Riding Hood; or, The Wicked Wolf and the Virtuous Wood-Cutter.—A Juvenile Pantomime in 1 Act. By TOM HOOD. 2 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, wood-cutter, old man, Red Riding Hood, old woman, wolf, harlequin, clown, pantaloon, columbine, fairy. Scenes, exterior of cottage, forest glade, interior of cottage, street with shops. This scenery may seem difficult, but directions are given by which it can be very easily arranged with a little paint, newspapers and lathes. The costumes are also very easily made. The above Pantomime was actually written and put on the stage (in a parlor), fully appointed with dresses and scenery, in two days by three people. Time of representation, forty-five minutes.

Hasty Conclusion (A).—A Burletta in 1 Act. By ELIZA PLANCHE. 5 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, French abbe, French uniform, German blacksmith and French peasant girl. Scene, interior of a cottage. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Henry Dunbar; or, A Daughter's Trials.—A Drama

in 4 Acts. By TOM TAYLOR. 10 Male and 3 Female characters. One of the best acting plays of the day. Costumes of the period. Scenery, modern English. Time of representation, three hours.

He's a Lunatic.—A Farce in 1 Act. By FELIX DALE. 3 Male and 2 Female characters. A sprightly, laughter-provoking production. Modern dresses, and scene, a drawing-room. Time of representation, forty minutes.

His First Brief.—A Comedietta in 1 Act. By SIDNEY DARYL. 3 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, a sitting-room neatly furnished. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

His Own Enemy.—A Farce in 1 Act. By the author of "The Happy Pair." 5 Male and 1 Female characters. An exceedingly pleasant, witty piece. Costumes, modern. Scene, a handsome parlor. Time of representation, fifty-five minutes.

Home.—A Comedy in 3 Acts. By T. W. ROBERTSON. 4 Male, 3 Female characters. A charming piece. Needs but a small company. Every character very good. Costumes, modern. Only one scene throughout the play. Time of representation, two hours.

Household Fairy (A).—A Domestic Sketch in 1 Act. By FRANCIS TALFOURD. 1 Male and 1 Female character. A gem in its line; artistic, dramatic and very natural. Modern costumes, and scene, a poorly furnished apartment. Time of representation, twenty-five minutes.

How to Settle Accounts with Your Laundress.—A Farce in 1 Act. By J. STERLING COYNE. 5 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, modern, page's suit, blouse, leggings, etc. Scene, a tailor's show-room, opening at the back to an inner room. Time of representation, fifty minutes.

Humors of the Strike.—A Farce in 1 Scene. 8 Male characters, including old man, deaf gent, Irishman, fop, "Mose." Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Hypochondriac (The).—5 Male characters, an eccentric old man, his two sons, a Yankee and an Irishman. Time of representation, fifteen or twenty minutes.

I'll Tell Your Wife.—A Farce in 1 Act. By W. S. WEBSTER. 4 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, room plainly furnished. Time of representation, thirty-five minutes.

I Love Your Wife.—A Musical Sketch in 1 Act. By ALFRED B. SEDGWICK. 1 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, a breakfast parlor. Dialogue, songs and music. In part of this play the woman assumes male costume, a fashionable swell. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

I'm not Meself at All.—An original Irish Stew in 1 Act. By C. A. MALBY. 3 Male and 2 Female characters. Costume of present day, undress uniform, Irish peasant and Highland dress. Scene, a room. Time of representation, twenty-eight minutes.

In for a Holiday.—A Farce in 1 Act. By F. C. BURNAND. 2 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes of the period, and scene, an interior. Time of representation, thirty-five minutes.

In the Wrong House.—A Farce in 1 Act. By MARTIN BECHER. 4 Male and 2 Female characters. A very justly popular piece. Two of the Male characters are excellent for light and low comedian. Good parts, too, for a young and old lady. Costumes, modern. Scenery, an ordinary room. Time of representation, twenty-five minutes.

Ingomar; or, The Noble Savage.—An Awful Warning in 1 Act. By R. REED. 16 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, burlesque classical. Scenes, market-place, camp in the woods, a public square. The scenes can be left entirely to the imagination of the audience if the performers wish. Time of representation, about fifty minutes.

Irish Dragoon; or, Wards in Chancery.—A Farce in 1 Act. By CHARLES SELBY. 5 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, eccentric trousers, paletot, Hessian boots, Rob Roy plaid trousers, shepherd's plaid shooting jacket, modern dress, for the men; fashionable walking dress, polka pelisse, etc., for the women. Scene, a counting-house. Time of representation, fifty minutes.

Irish Engagement (An).—A Farce in 1 Act. By W. WATTS. 4 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, military, livery, top boots, nankeen pants, stuff gown, Irish cap, etc. Scene, a room plainly furnished. Time of representation, forty-five minutes.

I Shall Invite the Major.—A Parlor Comedy in 1 Act. By G. VON MOSER. Containing 5 characters, 4 Male and 1 Female. A very pleasing little play, with good parts for all. Very bright and witty. Costumes, modern. Scene, a handsome interior. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Jack the Giant Killer.—A Fairy Play in 1 Act. 4 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, Knickerbocker suit, cap and feathers, short coat, etc., for JACK, any grotesque dress for GIANT, negligé dress for ladies. Scene, a plain room. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Jack Long.—A Drama in 2 Acts. By J. B. JOHNSTONE. 9 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes of the frontiers. Scenery illustrative of localities on the Texan frontier. Time of representation, one hour and twenty minutes.

Joy is Dangerous.—A Comedy in 2 Acts. By JAMES MORTIMER. 3 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, modern French. Scenery, two interiors. Time of representation, one hour and forty-five minutes.

Katharine and Petruchio; or, The Shaming of the True.—In 1 Act. By J. A. STERRY. 5 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, early Italian combined with modern English. Scenes, hall, state-room, and kitchen of a palace and villa of Petruchio. Time of representation, forty-five minutes.

Kind to a Fault.—An Original Comedy in 2 Acts. By WILLIAM BROUGH. 6 Male and 4 Female characters. A well written composition with well drawn characters. Costumes of the present day. Scenery, two elegantly furnished interiors. Time of representation, one hour and twenty minutes.

Last Drop (The).—A Temperance Drama in 1 Act. By JOHN H. DELAFIELD. 7 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scenes, a plain room, a street and a garret. Time of representation, twenty-five minutes.

Last Lily (The).—A Comedietta in 1 Act. By CLEMENT W. SCOTT. 3 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, French of 1793. Scene, a garden. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Last Leaf (The).—A Drama in 2 Acts. 5 Male and 3 Female characters. Leading man, juvenile, two low comedians, villain, leading lady, walking lady and soubrette. This drama is intensely interesting as a temperance drama. Time of representation, one hour and thirty minutes.

Law Allows It (The).—A Musical Monologue in 1 Act. By ALFRED B. SEDGWICK. 1 Male character. Costume, shabby genteel. Scene, a street. Song and music. Time of representation, ten minutes.

Let Those Laugh Who Win.—A Musical Sketch in 1 Act. By ALFRED B. SEDGWICK. 1 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, elegantly furnished room. Dialogue, song and music. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Leap Year.—A Musical Duality. By ALFRED B. SEDGWICK. The music adapted from Offenbach's "Geneviève de Brabant." 1 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, a handsome parlor. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Leedle Mistake (A).—A Dutch Sketch in 1 Act. By McDERMOTT and TRUMBLE. 3 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, ad libitum. Scene, a street, house with practicable door in flat. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Liar (The).—A Comedy in 2 Acts. By SAMUEL FOOTE. 7 Male and 2 Female characters. One of the best acting plays in any language. Costumes, embroidered court dresses, silk sacques, etc.; still the modern dress will suffice. Scenes, one a park, the other a drawing-room. Time of representation, one hour and twenty minutes. This edition, as altered by CHARLES MATHEWS, is particularly adapted for amateurs.

Little Brown Jug (The).—A Drama in 3 Acts, with a "Temperance" plot. 5 Male and 3 Female characters. Principal characters, an eccentric Yankee, good old man, two "juveniles," genteel "villain." Female parts, old lady, Yankee girl and "juvenile." Plain rooms. Time of representation, about one hour and thirty minutes.

Little More Cider (A).—5 Male and 3 Female characters. Two Yankees, walking gent. Dutchman and negro, old woman and two walking ladies. Temperance piece. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Little Rebel (The).—A Farce in 1 Act. By J. STERLING COYNE. 4 Male and 3 Female characters. An excellent piece for a sprightly young actress. Dresses and scenery of the present day. Easy of production. Time of representation, about forty-five minutes.

Little Red Riding Hood.—A Fairy Play in 1 Act. 3 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, wolf's mask, tunic, short wide trousers, long boots, mob cap, quilted petticoat, etc. Scene, interior and exterior of cottage. Time of representation, twenty-five minutes.

Little Silver Hair and the Three Bears.—A Pastoral Drama in 1 Act. 2 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, bear's head mask, top boots, flowered waistcoat, "girl of the period" dress, little girl's dress. Scene, wood and interior of cottage. Time of representation, fifteen minutes.

Little Ruby; or, Home Jewels.—A Domestic Drama in 3 Acts. By J. J. WALLACE. 6 Male and 6 Female characters. This drama is at once affecting and effective. LITTLE RUBY fine personation for young prodigy. Costumes, modern. Scenery, interior of dwelling and gardens. Time of representation, two hours.

Locked In.—A Comedietta in 1 Act. By J. P. WOOLER. 2 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes of the period. Scene, a drawing-room. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Locked in With a Lady.—A Sketch from Life. By H. R.

ADDISON. 1 Male and 1 Female characters. A very pleasing and humorous interlude. Costumes of the day, and scene, a bachelor's apartment. Time of representation, thirty-five minutes.

Locked Out.—A Comic Scene, illustrative of what may occur after dark in a great metropolis. By HOWARD PAUL. 1 Male and 2 Female characters, with others unimportant. Scene, a street. Costumes, modern. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Lodgers and Dodgers.—A Farce in 1 Act. By FREDERICK HAY. 4 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes of the present time. Scene, a furnished apartment. Time of representation, twenty-five minutes. One character a Yorkshire farmer.

Lonely Pollywog of the Mill Pond (The).—A Sanguinary Drama in 1 Act. By M. T. HEAD. 3 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, burlesque Spanish cavalier. Scenes, a mill pond, a gloomy glen and an interior of a hut. Uproariously funny. Time of representation, fifteen minutes.

Love.—A Burlesque in 1 Act. 3 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scenes, a drawing-room and a picnic ground. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Love of a Bonnet (A).—5 Female characters; old lady, 2 young girls, inquisitive old lady, Irish servant. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Love of Little Bo-Peep (The).—In 1 Act. 5 Male and 4 Female characters. Costumes, square-cut coats, knee breeches, flowered waistcoats, silk stockings, shoes and buckles, farmer's dress, flowered gown, quilted petticoats, traveling dress, shepherdess' hat and ribbons, etc. Scenes, kitchen and a field. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Lucy's Love Lesson.—A Comedietta in 1 Act. By JOHN LATEY, JR. 2 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, a drawing-room. Time of representation, fifteen minutes.

Lyrical Lover.—A Comedietta in 1 Act. By H. S. CLARK. 1 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, an elegantly furnished drawing-room. Time of representation, twenty-five minutes.

Mad Astronomer (A).—A Musical Sketch in 1 Act. By ALFRED B. SEDGWICK. 2 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, behind the scenes of a public hall or theatre. Time of representation, thirty minutes. This piece consists of dialogue and songs with the music.

Man with a Demijohn (The).—A Farce in 1 Scene. 4 Male characters. Yankee, two low comedians and negro. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Maria and Magdalena.—A Play in 4 Acts. By L. J. HOLLENIUS. 8 Male and 6 Female characters. An uniformly good stock company is alone needed to properly produce this charming piece. Costumes, modern. Scenery, fine interiors and beautiful gardens. Time of representation, three hours.

Marriage at Any Price.—A Farce in 1 Act. By J. P. WOOLER. 5 Male and 3 Female characters. A decided success in London. Costumes of the day. Two scenes, a plain chamber and a garden. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Marry in Haste and Repent at Leisure.—A Bombastic Play in 1 Act. 3 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, morning, slightly exaggerated. Scenes, a drawing-room, a dining-room and outside of a court-house. Time of representation, twenty-five minutes.

Master Jones' Birthday.—A Farce in 1 Act. By JOHN MADDISON MORTON. 4 Male and 2 Female characters. A very amusing and effective composition, particularly suited to amateurs. Dresses of the day, and scene, a plain interior. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Matched but not Mated; or, a Lunatic "Malgre Lui."—A Farce in 1 Act. 4 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, a drawing-room plainly furnished. One of the male characters assumes a woman's dress in one part of the play. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Maud's Peril.—A Drama in 4 Acts. By WATTS PHILLIPS. 5 Male and 3 Female characters. Strong and sensational. Costumes of English country life of the period. Scenery, not elaborate. Time of representation, two hours and a half.

Medical Man (A).—A Comedietta in 1 Act. By W. S. GILBERT. 2 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, an untidy and shabbily furnished apartment. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Middle Temple (The); or, Which is My Son ?—A Farce in 1 Act. By R. B. PEAKE. 8 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, old gentleman's suit, knee breeches, livery, Wellington boots, old-fashioned barber's coat, silk stockings, worsted stockings, etc.; saracenet dress, morning dress, turban, or toque, etc., for women. Scene, plain room. Time of representation, one hour.

Midnight Watch (The).—A Drama in 1 Act. By J. MADDISON MORTON. 8 Male and 2 Female characters. A successful little play. Costumes of the time of the French Revolution of 1795. Scene, the platform of a fortress. Time of representation, one hour.

Miriam's Crime.—A Drama in 3 Acts. By H. T. CRAVEN. 5 Male and 2 Female characters. One of the best acting plays, and easily put on the stage. Costumes, modern. Scenery, modern English interiors, two in number. Time of representation, two hours.

Mischievous Bob.—A Comic Drama in 1 Act. 6 Male characters. Costumes, old pants torn, linen check jacket, corduroy pants, pilot coat, carpenter's dress, fashionable dress, livery. Scene, room in a cottage. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Miseries of Human Life (The).—A Farce in 1 Act. By BENJAMIN WEBSTER. 2 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, nankeen trousers, morning gown, body coat, great coat, monkey jacket, etc. Scene, plain room. Time of representation, fifty-eight minutes.

Model of a Wife (A).—A Farce in 1 Act. By ALFRED WIGAN. 3 Male and 2 Female characters. Most amusing in conception and admirably carried out. Costumes of the day. Scene, a painter's studio. Time of representation, thirty-five minutes.

Money Makes the Man.—A Drama in 1 Act. By ARTHUR SKETCHLEY. 4 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, a drawing-room. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Monsieur Pierre.—A Pathetic Drama in 1 Act. 2 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, modern, except that MONSIEUR PIERRE should be dressed in very old clothes. Scene, a garden. Time of representation, thirty-five minutes.

Mr. Scroggins; or, Change of Name.—A Farce in 1 Act. By WILLIAM HANCOCK. 3 Male and 3 Female characters. A lively piece. Costumes of the present day. Scene, a drawing-room. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Mr. X.—A Farce in 1 Act. By SYDNEY ROSENFELD. 3 Male and 3 Female characters. An excruciatingly funny little piece, as full of life as prime Cliquot. Costumes, modern. Scene, a sitting-room. Time of representation, fifty minutes.

Mrs. Sairey Gamp's Tea and Turn Out.—A Bozzian Sketch in 1 Act. By BENJ. WEBSTER. 4 Male and 4 Female characters. Costumes, brown and black coats, light waistcoats, striped pants, blue and white spotted gown, fancy shawl, flowered gown, walking-dress, etc. Scenes, SWEDLEPIPE's shop, room at BETSEY PRIGGS' and MRS. GAMP's room. Time of representation, fifty minutes. Very funny.

Mulchay's Cat.—An Irish Sketch in 1 Act. By McDERMOTT and TRUMBLE. 2 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, ad libitum. Scene, a kitchen. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

My Brother's Keeper.—Drama in 3 Acts. 5 Male and 3 Female characters. First and second acts a counting house, third a parlor. Costumes, modern. Easy to produce. Time of representation, two hours.

My Friend in the Straps.—A Farce in 1 Act. By CHARLES SELBY. 5 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, morning coat, dress coat, short paletot, large pattern plaid pants, fancy waistcoat, high-lows, coachman's frock; evening dress and French cap for ladies. Scene, a room elegantly furnished. Time of representation, forty-five minutes. This play has a good part for an Irish, light or eccentric comedian.

My Uncle the Captain.—A Farce for 6 Male characters, including comic old man, Yankee, negro, etc. Costumes, modern. Time of representation, about twenty minutes.

My Uncle's Suit.—A Farce in 1 Act. By MARTIN BECHER. 4 Male and 1 Female characters. Has a jolly good low comedy part, a fine light comedy one, and a brisk, pert lady's maid. Costumes, modern. Scenery, a well furnished sitting-room. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

My Wife's Diary.—A Farce in 1 Act. By T. W. ROBERTSON. 3 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, modern French, and scene, a drawing-room. Time of representation, fifty minutes.

My Wife's Out.—A Farce in 1 Act. By G. HERBERT RODWELL. 2 Male and 2 Female characters. This piece had a successful run at the Covent Garden Theatre, London. Costumes, modern, and scene, an artist's studio. Time of representation, forty minutes.

My Walking Photograph.—A Musical Duality in 1 scene. Music arranged from "La Fille de Madame Angot." By ALFRED B. SEDGWICK. 1 Male and 1 Female characters. Scene, handsome parlor. Costumes, modern. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Never Reckon Your Chickens, &c.—A Farce in 1 Act. By WYBERT REEVE. 3 Male and 4 Female characters. Modern costumes, and scene, an interior. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Never Say Die.—A Farce. 3 Male and 3 Female characters. Males, eccentric middle-aged gent, cockney Englishman, and light comedy part; Females, light comedy, walking and chambermaid parts. Scene, plain room. Time of representation, about thirty minutes.

New Brooms Sweep Clean.—A Farce in 1 Scene. 6 Male characters. Old man, Irishman, Yorkshire, "Chinee," walking gent and servant. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

No Cure, No Pay.—A Farce in 1 Scene. 7 Female characters, including Irish girl, old lady and Yankee girl. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Nobody's Child.—A Romantic Drama in 3 Acts. By WATTS PHILLIPS. 18 Male and 3 Female characters. A domestic drama, wonderfully successful in London, as it abounds in stirring scenes and capital situations. Costumes, modern, suited to rural life in Wales. Scenery is wild and picturesque. Time of representation, two hours and a quarter.

Noemie.—A Drama in 2 Acts. Translated and adapted from the French of Dennehy and Clement by T. W. ROBERTSON. 4 Male and 4 Female characters. Originally acted in Paris, this piece created such a sensation that it was produced subsequently at all the leading theatres of London. Costumes, modern. Scenery, a garden scene and a richly furnished interior. Time of representation, one hour and a half. Easily put on the stage.

No Name.—A Drama in 5 Acts. By WILKIE COLLINS. 7 Male and 5 Female characters. A dramatization of the author's popular novel of the same name. Costumes of the present day. Scenery, four interiors and a sea view. Time of representation, three hours.

Not a Bit Jealous.—A Farce in 1 Act. By T. W. ROBERTSON. 3 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes of the day. Scene, a room. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Not Guilty.—A Drama in 4 Acts. By WATTS PHILLIPS. 10 Male and 6 Female characters. A thrilling drama founded upon fact. Costumes of the present day. Scenery, illustrative of localities about Southampton and its harbor, and of others in India. Time of representation, three hours.

Nothing Like Paste.—A Farce in 1 Act. By CHARLES MARSHAM RAE. 3 Male and 1 Female characters. Every character superexcellent. BILLY DOO a regular Burtonian part. Admirable piece for amateurs. Costumes, modern. Scenery, exterior of a small villa, with gardens. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Not Such a Fool as He Looks.—A Farceical Drama in 3 Acts. By HENRY J. BYRON. 5 Male and 4 Female characters. Excellent for amateurs. Costumes of the day. Scenery, three interiors. Time of representation, two hours.

Off the Stage.—An entirely original Comedietta in 1 Act. By SYDNEY ROSENFELD. 3 Male and 3 Female characters, all equally excellent. One of the sprightliest, wittiest and most amusing little plays ever written, causing almost an hour's constant merriment. Costumes, modern. Scene, a handsome interior.

On Bread and Water.—A Musical Farce in 1 Act. Being a free adaptation from the German. By SYDNEY ROSENFELD. A rollicking little piece. 1 Male and 2 Female characters. Containing a brilliant soubrette part. Costumes, modern. Scene, an uncarpeted school-room. Time of representation, twenty-five minutes.

Once on a Time.—A Drama in 2 Acts. 4 Male and 2 Female characters. Old man, juvenile man, villain, low comedy, leading lady, soubrette and child. Time of representation, one hour.

Orange Blossoms.—A Comedietta in 1 Act. By J. P. WOOLER. 3 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes of the present day, and scene, a garden with summer house. Time of representation, fifty minutes.

Original (The).—An Interlude in 1 Act. By J. M. MORTON. 6 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, modern and livery. Scene, interior. Time of representation, forty-five minutes.

Original Idea (An).—A Dialogue for a lady and gentleman, introducing reading, recitations and dramatic scenes. Costumes, modern. Time of representation to suit performers.

Old Man's Coat Tails (The).—An Irish Sketch in 1 Act. By McDERMOTT and TRUMBLE. 3 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, ad libitum. Scene, room shabbily furnished. Time of representation, fifteen minutes.

Ours.—A Comedy in 3 Acts. By T. W. ROBERTSON. 6 Male and 3 Female characters. One of the best and most admired plays in our language—while a fair stock company can play it acceptably. It has several characters fit for stars. Costumes, modern, with British military uniforms. Scenery, gardens, park, drawing-room, and rude hut in the Crimea. Time of representation, two hours and thirty minutes.

Our Clerks; or, No. 3 Fig Tree Court, Temple.—An original Farce in 1 Act. 7 Male and 5 Female characters. Costumes, modern, and scene, a large sitting-room solidly furnished. Time of representation, sixty-five minutes.

Our Mary Anne.—A Farce in 1 Act. By J. B. BUCKSTONE. 4 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, riding dress, male and female, Hessian boots, knee breeches and buckles, shoes and buckles, long waistcoats, riding hat and feather, muslin dress, striped petticoat, etc. Scene, a garden. Time of representation, fifty minutes.

Peace at Any Price.—A Farce in 1 Act. By T. W. ROBERTSON. 1 Male and 1 Female characters; but a variety of voices are heard throughout the piece, the speakers being invisible. A capital sketch for two lively amateur comedians. Costumes, modern. Scenery—there is but one scene throughout the piece—a meanly furnished apartment. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Peculiar Position (A).—A Farce in 1 Act. By J. R. PLANCHE. 5 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, military uniforms, peasants of Savoy and Piedmont, livery, traveling dress, morning dress. Scene, apartment in a chateau near Chambery. Time of representation, one hour.

Peddler of Very Nice (The).—A burlesque of the celebrated "Trial Scene from the Merchant of Venice." For 7 Male characters. No scenery required. Costumes, motley. Time of representation, twenty-five minutes.

Penelope Anne.—A Musical Farce in 1 Act. By F. C. BURNAND. 4 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, a plain room. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Pet Lamb (The).—A Domestic Scene in 1 Act. By C. W. SCOTT. 1 Male and 2 Female characters (one a child). Costumes, shabby. Scene, a room miserably furnished. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Pint of Ale (A).—A Temperance Sketch in 1 Act. 3 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, plain. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Plot and Passion.—A Drama in 3 Acts. From the French. By TOM TAYLOR. 7 Male and 2 Female characters. A neat and well constructed play, admirably adapted to amateur representation. Costumes of the period of the First Empire, rich and attractive. Scenes, an interior in a French mansion, and one in a country villa. Time of representation, one hour and a half.

Poppleton's Predicaments.—A Farce in 1 Act. By CHARLES M. RAE. 3 Male and 6 Female characters. Costumes of the day. Scene a drawing-room. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Porter's Knot (The).—A Serio-comic Drama in 2 Acts. By JOHN OXENFORD. 8 Male and 2 Female characters. Interesting and thoroughly dramatic. Costumes of the day. Scenes, an interior of a cottage and exterior of sea-side hotel. Time of representation, one hour and a quarter.

Post Boy (The).—An original Drama in 2 Acts. By H. T. CRAVEN. 5 Male and 3 Female characters. Very successful. Costumes, modern. Scenery, two interiors. Time of representation, one hour and a half.

Precious Pickle (A).—6 Female characters, old maid, talkative woman, three school-girls, colored help. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Private Inquiry (A).—A Farce in 1 Act. By B. WEBSTER, JR. 4 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, modern, except Walter Worricow, the leading part (low comedy), who wears Hessian boots, black coat, vest and pantaloons. Scene, a well-furnished room. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Public Benefactor (A).—6 Male characters, old man, young man, eccentric comedian, a countryman, a lubberly boy, an Irishman. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Party Shure Cure, (A).—An Irish Sketch in 1 Act. By McDERMOTT and TRUMBLE. 2 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, ad libitum. Scene, plain room. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Putkins, Heir to Castles in the Air.—A Comic Drama in 1 Act. By WILLIAM R. EMERSON. 2 Male and 2 Female characters. Scene, kitchen. Costumes, modern. Time of representation, forty-five minutes.

Quite at Home.—A Comedietta in 1 Act. By ARTHUR SKETCHLEY. 5 Male and 2 Female characters. A real lively taking piece. All the characters passable. Costumes, modern. Scenery, a shabbily furnished apartment. Time of representation, forty-five minutes.

Race Ball (The); or, Chaos is Come Again.—A Farce in 1 Act. By J. M. MORTON. 6 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, military, jockey, livery, evening dress, riding habit, ball-dress. Scenes, a room at an inn, a ball-room. Time of representation, forty-five minutes.

Race for a Dinner (A).—A Farce in 1 Act. By J. F. G. ROWELL. 10 Male characters. A sterling piece. Costumes of the day. Scene, a tavern exterior. Time of representation, sixty minutes.

Red Chignon (The).—6 Female characters; old maid, fashionable lady, four school-girls. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Result of a Nap (The).—A Farce in 1 Act. 3 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, hunting dress, loose pants, dressing-gown and morning dress. Scene, room neatly furnished. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Robin Hood; or, The Merry Men of Sherwood Forest.—A Sylvan Drama in 2 Acts. 11 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, tunic, armor, tights, russet boots, bishop's dress, monk's dress, crown, dresses trimmed with ermine, etc. Scenes, a forest, a grand hall. Time of representation, forty-five minutes. Directions are given by which the "elaborate" scenery of this play can easily be arranged in a parlor.

Runaways (The).—4 Male characters, an old farmer, two school-boys, a policeman. Time of representation, fifteen minutes.

Ruy Blas.—A Romantic Drama in 4 Acts, from the French of VICTOR HUGO. 12 male and 4 female characters. This piece was eminently successful in London when produced by Mr. Fechter. It contains numerous scenes, capable of being performed unconnected with the drama, by amateurs. Spanish costumes of 1692. Scenery, halls and apartments in the royal palace at Madrid. Time of representation, three hours and a half.

Sayings and Doings; or, The Rule of Contrary.—A Farce in 1 Act. By J. M. MORTON. 5 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, riding-dress, morning-dress, old-fashioned dresses, livery, etc. Scenes, one room plainly furnished, and one neatly furnished. Time of representation, forty-five minutes.

School.—A Comedy in 4 Acts. By T. W. ROBERTSON. 6 Male and 6 Female characters. Is a very superior piece, and has three characters unusually good for either sex. Could be played with fine effect at a girls' seminary. Costumes, modern. Scenery, English landscape and genteel interiors. Time of representation, two hours and forty minutes.

School for Scheming.—(Played at Wallack's under the title of "Love and Money.") A Comedy in 5 Acts. By DION BOUCAULT. 7 Male and 8 Female characters. Costumes, modern suits, monkey jacket, fancy waistcoat and trousers, coat trimmed with fur, evening dress, riding coat, Newmarket coat, ball dress, morning dress, modern dresses. Scenes, plain room, drawing-room handsomely furnished, ball-room, pier at Boulogne-Sur-Mer. Time of representation, two hours and fifty minutes. An excellent comedy, very successful.

School for Tigers (The); or, The Shilling Hop.—A Farce in 1 Act. By MARK LEMON. 14 Male and 13 Female characters. Costumes, drab coat, nankeen breeches, striped vest, top boots, liveries, policeman's dress, modern dresses. Scenes, room of a public house, large plain room. Eight of the male characters are taken by females, dressed in livery (as tigers). Time of representation, one hour and twenty minutes.

Sculptor's Triumph (The).—A National Allegory for 1 Male and 1 Female character who speak, and three Female characters who personate statuary in the tableau groups incidental to the piece. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Sea of Troubles (A).—A Farce in 1 Scene. 8 Male characters. Old man, Yankee, Irishman, stuttering man, eccentric walking gent, low comedian. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Seeing the Elephant.—A Temperance Farce. 5 Male and 2 Female characters. Eccentric old man, lover, boy, Irishman, ducky, Yankee girl and old lady. Scene, plain room. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Sentinel (The).—A Musical Burletta in 1 Act. By J. M. MORTON. 4 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, military, court dress, red petticoat, velvet bodice, etc. Scene, view of palace and garden, quite elaborate. Time of representation, one hour.

Sheep in Wolf's Clothing (A).—A Domestic Drama in 1 Act. Freely adapted from Madame de Girardin's "Une Femme qui deteste Son Mari," by TOM TAYLOR. 7 Male and 5 Female characters. A neat and pleasing domestic play, founded upon incidents following Monmouth's rebellion. Costumes of the time of James II of England. Scene, a tapestried chamber. Time of representation, one hour.

Sign of Affection (A); or, The Hen and Chickens.—A Comic Drama in 2 Acts. By B. WEBSTER, JR. 5 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, midshipman's, livery and modern. Scene, handsomely furnished room. Time of representation, one hour and forty-five minutes.

Silent' Protector (A).—A Farce in 1 Act. By THOMAS J. WILLIAMS. 3 Male and 2 Female characters. An active, bustling piece of ingenuity, which affords abundant opportunities for the display of QUICKFIDGET's eccentricities. Costumes of the period. Scene, a drawing-room. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Silent Woman (A).—A Farce in 1 Act. By THOMAS HAILES LACY. 2 Male and 1 Female characters. One of the prettiest little pieces on the English stage. Dresses of the period. Scene, a drawing-room. Time of representation, thirty-five minutes.

Silverstone's Wager.—A Comedietta in 1 Act. By R. R. ANDREWS. 4 Male and 3 Female characters. Scene, plainly furnished reception room in an academy. Easily managed. Costumes, modern. Very successful wherever performed. Time of representation, fifty minutes.

Single Life.—A Comedy in 3 Acts. By J. B. BUCKSTONE. 5 Male and 5 Female characters. Costumes, English dresses of 1839. Scenes, interiors, some plain and some elegantly furnished. One of BUCKSTONE's most laughable comedies. Time of representation, two hours.

Society.—A Comedy in 3 Acts. By T. W. ROBERTSON. 16 Male and 5 Female characters. A play exceedingly popular, intended to exhibit the foibles of British society and to ridicule the election system. Costumes of the present day. Scenery, elaborate. Time of representation, two hours and a half.

Spelling Match (The).—A Comic Musical Duality. By ALFRED B. SEDGWICK. 1 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, a landscape. Words and music. Time of representation, fifteen minutes.

Spitfire (The).—A Farce in 1 Act. By J. M. MORTON. 6 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, navy uniform, sailors, old-fashioned coat, nankeen breeches, high boots, flap waistcoat, captain's uniform, long cloak, etc. Scenes, room at an inn, cabin and deck of a vessel. One of the female characters assumes a male costume part of the time. Time of representation, one hour. A roaring farce.

Stand by the Flag; or, The Fall of Sumter.—A Drama in 1 Act. 5 Male characters. Veteran of the Revolution, two juvenile men, Irishman and negro. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Sylvia's Soldier.—A Drama in 2 Acts. 3 Male, 2 Female characters. Old man, light comedian, low comedian, leading lady and juvenile lady. Time of representation, one hour.

Taming a Tiger.—A Farce in 1 Act. Altered from the French. 3 Male characters. In this a dashing light comedian and fiery, petulant old man cannot fail to extort applause. Modern dresses, and scene, a modern apartment. Time of representation, twenty-five minutes.

Tell-Tale Heart (A).—A Comedietta in 1 Act. By THOMAS PICTON. 1 Male and 2 Female characters. Excellent for private representation. Costumes of the day. Scene, a villa room. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Tempest in a Teapot (A).—Petite Comedy in 1 Act. 2 Male and 1 Female characters. Admirably adapted for private performance. Costumes of the day. Scene, an interior. Time of representation, thirty-five minutes.

Tempter (The); or, The Sailor's Return.—A Drama in 1 Act. 3 Male, 1 Female characters. Leading man, villain, low comedy, juvenile lady. This is also a temperance drama, and quite effective. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Tender Attachment (A).—A Farce for 7 Male characters, including Irishman, Frenchman, Dutchman and Yankee. Originally published in "Oliver Optic's Magazine," under the title of "A Soldier, a Sailor, a Tinker and a Tailor." Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Thief of Time (The).—A Humorous Dialogue, or Short Farce. 6 Male characters; 3 school-boys, a deaf gentleman, a countryman and an Irishman. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Thirty Minutes for Refreshments.—A Farce in 1 Scene. 4 Male, 3 Female characters. Eccentric comedian, peppery military man, walking gent, negro, walking lady, old maid and soubrette. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Three Grocers (The); or, Hobbs, Dobbs and Stubbs.—A Comedy in 2 Acts. By BENJAMIN WEBSTER. 5 Male and 5 Female characters. Costumes, small clothes, top boots and modern dresses. Scenes, interiors, plain and elegantly furnished. Time of representation, forty-five minutes.

Three Temptations (The).—A Masque for the Moderns, novel, allegorical, musical and spectacular. In 1 Act. By E. L. BLANCHARD. 7 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, armor, tights, fairy, etc., rich and fine. Scenes, banqueting hall, sea-shore by moonlight, an attic, path in the forest. Allegorical. Time of representation, one hour.

There's Millions in It.—A Musical and Dramatic Sketch. By ALFRED B. SEDGWICK. 2 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes modern. Scene, a landscape. Songs and Music. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Thorn Among the Roses (A).—A Comedy in 1 Act. 2 Male, 8 Female characters. Written to supply a want in female schools, where very few male actors can be obtained. Time of representation, about thirty minutes.

Tiger at Large (The); or, The Cad of the "Bus."—A Burletta in 1 Act. By GEORGE BLINK. 5 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, conductor's hat and coat, Hessian boots, livery, modern dresses. Scenes, a street, a room plainly furnished. Time of representation, one hour.

Time and the Hour.—A Drama in 3 Acts. By J. PALGRAVE SIMPSON and FELIX DALE. 7 Male and 3 Female characters. An excellent acting play, full of life and incident, the parts of MEDLICOTT and MARIAN BECK being capable of impressive representation—all others good. Costumes of the present period. Scenery, gardens and exterior, cottage and garden, and an old oaken chamber. Time of representation, two hours and a half.

Time and Tide.—A Drama in 3 Acts and a Prologue. By HENRY LESLIE. 7 Male and 5 Female characters. An effective piece, with novel and striking incidents. Costumes, English, present day. Scenery, London and river scenery. Time of representation, two hours.

Timothy to the Rescue.—A Farce in 1 Act. By HENRY J. BYRON. 4 Male and 2 Female characters. In this laughable piece SPANGLE assumes several personifications. Costumes of the day, and scene, a plain interior. Time of representation, forty-five minutes.

Tipperary Legacy (The).—A Farce in 1 Act. By STERLING COYNE. 5 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, Newmarket coat, crimson silk vest, plaid trousers, ragged coat, paper cap, cord trousers, policeman's suit, modern dresses, etc. Scene, a street with set houses each side. Time of representation, fifty minutes. An excellent Irish part in this play.

Tootle, Tootle, Too; or, The Frenchman and His Pupil.—A Musical Sketch in 1 Act. By ALFRED B. SEDGWICK. Costumes, modern. Scene, a drawing-room. Songs and Music. Time of representation, fifteen minutes.

Tournament of Idylcourt.—An Allegory. Female characters only. Thirteen speaking parts, interspersed with music and tableaux. Can be performed on a platform, or more elaborately produced. Time of representation, about thirty-five minutes.

Tragedy Transmogrified.—A Burlesque in 1 Act. 3 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scenes, a plain room, and a stage. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Turning the Tables.—A Farce in 1 Act. By JOHN POOLE. 5 Male and 3 Female characters. One of the happiest efforts of the famous author of "Paul Pry." The part of JEREMIAH BUMPS is redolent with quaint humor. A standard acting piece. Dresses and scenery of the present day. Time of representation, sixty-five minutes.

Tweedie's Rights.—A Comedy in 2 Acts. By JAMES ALBERRY. 4 Male and 2 Female characters. Has several excellent characters. JOHN TWEEDIE powerful personation; TIM WHIFFLER very funny. Costumes, modern. Scenery, a stone-mason's yard and modest interior. Time of representation, one hour and twenty-five minutes.

Twice Killed.—A Farce in 1 Act. By JOHN OXENFORD. 6 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, landscape and a drawing-room. Time of representation, forty-five minutes.

Two Gay Deceivers; or, Black, White and Gray.—A Farce in 1 Act. By T. W. ROBERTSON. 3 Male characters. Adapted from the French of one of the most laughable vaudevilles on the Parisian stage. Costumes of the present day. Scene, a cell in a police station. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Two Gentlemen at Mivarts.—A Duologue in 1 Act. 2 Male characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, a plain room. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Two Polts (The).—A Farce in 1 Act. By JOHN COURTNEY. 4 Male and 4 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scenery, a street and two interiors. Time of representation, forty-five minutes.

Uncle's Will.—A Comedietta in 1 Act. By S. THEYRE SMITH. 2 Male and 1 Female characters. A brilliant piece; can be easily played in a parlor. Costumes, modern, and naval uniform for CHARLES. Scenery, set interior, drawing-room. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Up for the Cattle Show.—A Farce in 1 Act. By HARRY LEMON. 6 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, English of the present day. Scene, a parlor. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Using the "Weed."—7 Female characters; walking lady, three school-girls, two old maids, comic servant. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Vandyke Brown.—A Farce in 1 Act. By ADOLPHUS CHARLES TROUGHTON. 3 Male and 3 Female characters. Popular wherever performed. Costumes of the present day. Scene, a chamber, backed by a window. Time of representation, one hour.

Village Doctor (The).—A Drama in 2 Acts. By BENJAMIN WEBSTER. 4 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, small clothes, top boots, military overcoat, coat trimmed with fur, frogs and braid, cord trousers, Hessian boots, morning gown, huntsman's coat, high leather gaiters, lace gown, bonnet and feathers, India shawl, morning dress, etc. Scenes, interiors, plain and richly furnished. Time of representation, one hour and thirty minutes.

Virtue Victorious.—A Burlesque in the old Standard Comedy style in 1 Act. 4 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, shooting-jacket, wide-awake hat, knee breeches, gaiters, shooting boots, riding-coat, butcher's boots, footman's livery, etc. Scenes, outside of a farm-house, plain room. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Visions of Freedom.—An Allegory. Female characters only. Sixteen speaking parts, interspersed with music and tableaux. Can be performed on a platform, or more elaborately produced. Time of representation, about thirty-five minutes.

Volunteer Review (The); or, The Little Man in Green.—A Farce in 1 Act. By THOMAS J. WILLIAMS. 6 Male and 6 Female characters. Easily localized as the "Home Guard," or "Militia Muster." Costumes of the day, and scene, a room. Time of representation, forty-five minutes.

Wanted, a Male Cook.—A Farce in 1 Scene. 4 Male characters. Old man, Yankee, Irishman and Frenchman. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Wanted, a Young Lady.—A Farce in 1 Act. By W. E. SUTER. 3 Male characters. Effective for amateurs. Costumes of the day. Scene, a room. Time of representation, forty minutes.

War of the Roses (The).—An Allegory for 8 Female characters who speak, and choruses. Very successful in the Boston School Exhibitions. Time of representation, twenty-five minutes.

War to the Knife.—A Comedy in 3 Acts. By HENRY J. BYRON. 5 Male and 4 Female characters. A pleasing, entertaining and morally instructive lesson as to extravagant living; capitally adapted to the stage. Costumes of the present time. Scenes, three interiors. Time of representation, one hour and three-quarters.

Weak Points.—A Comedy in 2 Acts. By J. B. BUCKSTONE. 6 Male and 5 Female characters. Costumes, military coat, wrapper and night-cap, calash and cloak, modern. Scene, interiors, plain and well furnished, passage and landing-place. Time of representation, one hour and forty minutes.

Wearing of the Green.—A Burlesque Drama in 1 Act. 3 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, conventional dress of the stage Irishman. Scene, a cabin, a fair, a prison. Time of representation, twenty-five minutes.

We're all Teetotallers.—A Farce in 1 Scene. 4 Male, 2 Female characters. 3 Yankees, 1 city gent, Yankee dame and Yankee girl. Good temperance piece. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Who is Who? or, All in a Fog.—A Farce. Adapted from the French by THOMAS J. WILLIAMS. 3 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, modern English dresses as worn by country gentry, and scene, parlor in an old-fashioned country house. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Widow Hunt (A).—An Original Comedy in 3 Acts. By J. STERLING COYNE. 4 Male and 4 Female characters. An ingenious and well-known alteration of the same author's "Everybody's Friend," the part of MAJOR WELLINGTON DE BOOTS having been rendered popular by Mr. J. S. Clarke in England and America. Costumes and scenery of the period. Time of representation, two hours and a half.

Who Got the Pig?—An Irish Sketch in 1 Act. By McDERMOTT and TRUMBLE. 3 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, ad libitum. Scene, a plain room. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Who's Your Friend? or, The Queensbury Fete.—A Comic Drama in 2 Acts. By J. R. PLANCHE. 4 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, rich and elegant. Scene, garden decorated and lighted up for a fete, saloon handsomely furnished. Time of representation, one hour and thirty-two minutes.

Why did You Die?—A Petite Comedy in 1 Act. By CHAS. MATHEWS. 3 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, square-cut coats, livery, modern dress, etc. Scene, a boudoir. Time of representation, fifty minutes.

Wine Cup (The); or, Saved at Last.—A Temperance Sketch in 1 Scene. 5 Male and 4 Female characters. Costumes, torn coat, shabby pants, checked pants, fancy vest, child's shabby dress, policeman's uniform, white dress. Scenes, bar-room, prison. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

A Woman will be a Woman.—A Duologue in 1 Act. By J. REDDING WARE. 1 Male and 1 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, a drawing-room, handsomely furnished. Time of representation, twenty-five minutes.

Womens' Rights.—A Comedietta in 2 Acts. By RETLAW SPRING. 3 Male and 8 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scenes, plain room, ladies' club, a village. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Woman's Vows and Masons' Oaths.—In 4 Acts. By A. J. H. DUGANNE. 10 Male and 4 Female characters. Has effective situations, fine characters, and beautiful dialogues. Costumes modern, with Federal and Confederate uniforms. Scenery, interiors in country houses, and warlike encampments. Time of representation, two hours and thirty minutes.

Woodcock's Little Game.—A Comedy Farce in 2 Acts. By J. MADDISON MORTON. 4 Male and 4 Female characters. A sparkling, lively composition, by one of the most humorous dramatic authors. The part of WOODCOCK has been performed by Charles Mathews and Lester Wallack. Costumes of the period. Scenery, modern apartments, handsomely furnished. Time of representation, one hour.

Wrong Bottle (The).—A Temperance Sketch in 1 Act. By McDERMOTT and TRUMBLE. 2 Male characters. Costumes, ad libitum. Scene, a study. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Young Collégian (The) (The Cantab).—A Farce in 1 Act. By T. W. ROBERTSON. 3 Male and 2 Female characters. A rattling piece, filled with ludicrous situations, which could be splendidly worked up by a good light comedian. Costumes, modern. Scene, a handsome interior. Time of representation, fifty minutes.

Young Scamp (The).—A Ducky Sketch in 1 Scene. By ADD WEAVER. 3 Male characters. The players that can't tickle an audience with this piece had better "hang up de fiddle and de bow." Time of representation, fifteen minutes.

Your Life's in Danger.—A Farce in 1 Act. By JOHN MADDISON MORTON. 3 Male and 3 Female characters. Scene, well furnished room. Costumes, laped coats, flowered waistcoats, breeches, etc., for males; velvet dresses, etc., for females. Time of representation, one hour.

ARNOLD'S

Dialogues, Plays and Speeches.

A collection of short Dramatic Sketches, Witty and Sparkling Dialogues, and a variety of Pathetic, Serious and Comic Speeches. Designed for the use of schools, social gatherings and evening parties, by ANDRE ARNOLD.

CONTENTS.

Dialogues:

- Mrs. Sniffles' Confession.—1 Male and 1 Female character.
 The French Cook.—2 Male characters.
 Examination Day at the Seminary.—11 Female characters.
 Fashionable Requirements.—3 Female characters.
 The Poet Under Difficulties.—5 Male characters.
 The Goddess of Folly.—12 Female characters.
 The Light of Love.—2 Male characters.
 The Debating Club.—4 Male characters.
 The Fox and the Ranger.—2 Male characters.

Plays:

A Noble Vagabond.—A Sketch in 1 Act. 2 Male characters. Costumes, Spanish. Scene, simple. Time in representation, fifteen minutes.

The Three Men of Science.—A Comic Sketch in 1 Act. 4 Male characters. Costumes and scenes easy. Time in representation, thirty minutes. This is a very laughable piece, and cannot fail to "bring down the house."

Slighted Treasures.—A Petite Comedy in 1 Act. 4 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scenery, plain. Time in representation, forty-five minutes.

The Harvest Storm.—A Domestic Drama in 1 Act. 10 Male characters. Costumes, modern. Scene, simple. Time in representation, forty minutes.

A Silent Woman.—Comedietta in 1 Act. 1 Male and 1 Female character. Costumes, modern. Scene, a drawing-room. Time in representation, twenty minutes.

Furnished Apartments.—A Comic Interlude in 1 Act. 5 Male characters. Costumes and scenery easy. Time in representation, fifty minutes.

Tact and Fact.—A Comic Sketch in 1 Scene. 1 Male and 1 Female character.

ter. Costumes, modern. Scene, a drawing-room. Time in representation, fifteen minutes.

The Babes in the Wood; or, The Feroocious Uncle and the Avenging Robins.—A Domestic Tragedy in 1 Act. 7 Male characters. Costumes and scenery easy. Time in representation, thirty minutes.

Too Attentive by Half.—A Comic Sketch in 1 Act. 2 Male and 1 Female character. Costumes, modern. Scene, a handsomely furnished apartment. Time in representation, thirty minutes.

Decidedly Cool.—A Comic Sketch in 1 Act. 2 Male and 1 Female character. Costumes, modern. Scene, simple. Time in representation, twenty minutes.

Killing Time.—A Comedietta in 1 Act. 1 Male and 1 Female character. Costumes, modern. Scene, an elegant apartment. Time in representation, twenty-five minutes.

SPEECHES:

Rory O'Moore's Present to the Priest.
 The Widow Bedott's Letter to Elder Sniffles.

The Yankee Landlord.
 Lord Dundreary's Riddle.
 Antony and Cleopatra.

Lecture on Bad Boys.
 Hezekiah Stubbins' Oration, July 4th.
 Old Sugar's Courtship.

Mr. Caudle Wants a "Latch-Key."
 A Mother to Her Boy.
 The Falls of Lodore.

The Battle of Ivry.
 "All We Ask is to be Let Alone."
 The Two Roads.

Custer's Last Charge.
 Spartacus to the Gladiators at Capua.
 Josh Billings on Courting.

The Three Warnings.
 The Debating Society.
 Jimmy Butler and the Owl.

Aurelia's Unfortunate Young Man.
 A Showman on the Woodchuck.

1 Volume, Neat Paper Covers. Price.....30 cts.
 Bound in Cloth. Price.....50 cts.

Sent by mail, on receipt of the price, by

HAPPY HOURS COMPANY, Publishers,

No. 1 Chambers Street, New York.

LITTLE PLAYS FOR LITTLE PEOPLE.

A series of favorite Tales of childhood, arranged in a dramatic form for home performance, school exhibitions, etc. With full directions as regards management of costumes, scenery, etc.

CONTENTS.

Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp.—A Drama of ups and downs, for young ladies and gentlemen, in 2 Acts. 6 Male and 3 Female characters. Mandarin, ladies in waiting, maids of honor, ushers, guards, gamins, etc. Costumes elaborate. Scenes, interiors and exteriors. Time of representation, one hour.

Blue Beard; or, Female Curiosity.—A Sensation Drama in 2 Acts. 6 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, Turkish. Scene, a room in Blue Beard's castle. Time of representation, thirty minutes.

Frog Prince (The).—A Fairy Play in 1 Act. 2 Male and 1 Female character. Costumes, doublet, hose, puffed breeches, Spanish cloak, regal robes, long mantle and train, etc. Scene, a wood and apartment in a palace. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Jack the Giant Killer.—A Fairy Play in 1 Act. 4 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, Knickerbocker suit, cap and feathers, short coat, cap, etc., for JACK, any grotesque dress for GIANT, negligé dress for ladies. Scene, a plain room. Time of representation, twenty minutes.

Little Red Riding Hood.—A Fairy Play in 1 Act. 3 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, wolf's mask, tunic, short wide trousers, long boots, mob cap, quilted petticoat, etc. Scene, interior and exterior of cottage. Time of representation, twenty-five minutes.

Little Silver Hair and the Three Bears.—A Pastoral Drama in 1 Act. 2 Male and 2 Female characters. Costumes, bear's head mask, top boots, flowered waistcoat, "girl of the period" dress, little girl's dress. Scene, wood and interior of cottage. Time of representation, fifteen minutes.

Loves of Little Bo-Peep (The).—In 1 Act. 5 Male and 4 Female characters. Costumes, square-cut coats, knickerboches, flowered waistcoats, silk stockings, shoes and buckles, farmer's dress, flowered gown, quilted petticoats, traveling dress, shepherdess' hat and ribbons, etc. Scenes, kitchen and a field. Time of representation, forty minutes.

Robin Hood; or, The Merry Men of Sherwood Forest.—A Sylvan Drama in 2 Acts. 11 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, tunic, armor, tights, russet boots, bishop's dress, monk's dress, crown, dresses trimmed with ermine, etc. Scenes, a forest, a grand hall. Time of representation, forty-five minutes.

This book contains full directions for producing the "elaborate scenery and costumes" of the above plays in any parlor, at very little trouble and expense.

PRICE 30 CENTS.

HOW WE MANAGED OUR PRIVATE THEATRICALS; Or, a Guide to the Amateur Stage.

Containing plain directions for the construction and arrangement of the Stage, painting the Scenery, getting up the Costumes, making the Properties and Accessories, Hints on Stage Effects, instructions for making Calcium Lights, etc., etc. Prepared for the use of schools, private families and dramatic clubs.

CONTENTS IN PART.

Introduction. Construction of a Stage. Proscenium and Auditorium. The Curtain and Drop. Lighting the Stage. Scenery and Scene Painting. Costumes, Properties and Accessories. Stage Effects, etc., etc.

Sixteen Descriptive Illustrations and Diagrams.

Penelope Anne—A Musical Farce in 1 Act. 4 Male, 1 Female character. Costumes and Properties easy. Scene, Public Room in a small hotel on the Continent. Time in representation, about thirty minutes.

PRICE 25 CENTS.

Either of the above will be sent by mail, on receipt of the price, by

HAPPY HOURS COMPANY, Publishers,

No. 1 Chambers Street, New York.

EVENING ENTERTAINMENTS.

A collection of Plays, Charades, Tableaux, Wax Works, Parlor Games, Amusements, etc., etc.

CONTENTS.

"All is not Gold that Glitters."—A Dramatic Proverb in 1 Scene. 2 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, modern. Scenery, simple. Time in representation, twenty minutes.

Pilgrimage.—An Acting Charade in 4 Acts. 4 Male and 4 Female characters. (One an Irish servant.) Costumes, modern. Scenery, simple. Time in representation, forty-five minutes.

A Little Play for Little Folks.—(A Christmas Piece). 4 Male and 3 Female characters. Costumes, easy. Scene, a back parlor. Time in representation, twenty minutes.

The Miser's Supper.—A Trick Pantomime. 3 Male characters. Costumes, scenery and properties simple and easy. Time in representation, fifteen minutes.

Jarley's Wax Works.—9 Male and 5 Female characters. Costumes and scene easily arranged. Time in representation, thirty minutes.

Tableau Vivants.—The Surrender of Calais, 1347. Queen Isabella and Roger Mortimer, 1330. The Marriage of Henry VII with Elizabeth of York, 1486. Murder of David Rizzio, 1566. Charles I and His Children, 1649. All of the above can easily be arranged with material in almost any family.

Parlor Games and Amusements.—The One-Syllable Game. The Dialogue Game. The Game of Clumps. The Blind Feeding the Blind. Blowing out the Candle—an Optical Delusion. A Match Under the Microscope. The Modus Operandi of Table Raising. Acting Rhymes. Seeing through your hand. To Take off a Person's Shirt while His Clothes are on.

Chemical Recreations.—Rosin Grapes. To Hold Paper over the Flame of a Candle without Burning it. Cold and Hot, Which is Which? The Candle Invisibly Extinguished.

PRICE 15 CENTS.

THE HOLIDAY GUEST.

A collection of Stories, Games and Amusements for winter evenings.

CONTENTS.

The Editor's Christmas Greeting, illustrated. Found in a Muniment Chest, by the author of "Lady Audley's Secret." The Death's-Head Club—A Legend of Savannah. Carol. A Million a Minute. Card Tricks, 5 illustrations. Modern Popular Conjuring. Games for the Little Ones. Blue Beard Tableaux, 3 illustrations. An Acting Drama. The Boomerang, illustrated. Amusing Experiments. The Mystery of the Floating Head, 2 illustrations. The Dancing Skeleton. Bobbing Around; or, The Game of Families. Lost and Found in the Snow. Nuts to Crack. Puzzles, Enigmas, Charades, Conundrums, etc., etc., 24 illustrations. The Christmas Tree, illustrated, etc., etc., etc. One volume, paper covers.

PRICE 10 CENTS.

Either of the above will be sent by mail, on receipt of the price, by

HAPPY HOURS COMPANY, Publishers,

No. 1 Chambers Street, New York.

PARLOR AMUSEMENTS FOR THE YOUNG FOLKS.

Designed for the use of Schools, Church Societies, Home Amusement, etc., etc. By G. B. BARTLETT. New edition. Revised and enlarged. Every one of the entertainments contained in this work have been tried before large audiences in hundreds of cities, under the personal supervision of the author, and they are now simplified and arranged for performance by old and young.

CONTENTS.

Hints on Tableaux.	Villikens and His Dinah, an Illustrated Ballad.
Scenes in the Life of Marie Stuart.	Charades (fifteen different ones).
Elaborate Tableaux.	Games of Thought.
The Lily Maid of Astolat.	The Mental Index.
Jarley Wax Works.	Declamation, with Selections.
The Babes in the Wood, a Pantomime.	Social Amusements, or, Full Directions for a Hall Entertainment and how to prepare it in any City or Village.
The Magic Mirror, a Vision.	Private Theatricals.
The Miser's Supper, a Pantomime.	List of Plays suitable for Private Performances.
Love in Ambush, a Pantomime.
The Sleeping Beauty, a Pantomime.
Auld Robin Gray, an Illustrated Ballad.
The Mistletoe Bough, an Illustrated Ballad.
Neat Paper Covers. Price.....	30 cts.
Bound in Cloth.....	75 cts.

Parlor Tableaux; or, Animated Pictures.

For the use of Families, Schools and Public Exhibitions. By TONY DENIER, author of "Tony Denier's Parlor Pantomimes," "Amateur's Guide," "Shadow Pantomimes," etc. Containing about eighty popular subjects, with plain and explicit directions for arranging the stage, dressing-rooms, lights, full description of costumes, duties of stage manager, properties and scenery required, and all the necessary directions for getting them up. Among the contents there are nine tableaux for male and an equal number for female characters only. A great number of them introduce groups of boys and many more groups of girls only; others again introducing both; and still more in which entire classes can take part. Everything is stated in a plain, simple manner, so that it will be easily understood; everything like style or unnecessary show has been avoided. For public or private entertainment, there is nothing which is so interesting and instructive as the tableau. Price.....25 cts.

Shadow Pantomimes; or, Harlequin in the Shade.

How to get them up and how to act in them; with full and concise instructions and numerous illustrations. Also, full and complete descriptions of properties and costumes.

CONTENTS.

Introduction; Shadow Bluff, or, Who's Who? Tooth Drawing Extraordinary; Amputation like Winking; The Haunted House; We Won't Go Home till Morning; Joeko, or the Mischievous Monkey; The Madcap Barber; Cribbage, or, The Devil among the Cards; The Lover's Stratagem; The Game of	Base Ball; Regular Hash, or, The Boarding-House Conspiracy; The Mechanical Statue; The African Sereaders; The Model Prize Fight; The Magic Cask, or, The Industrious and Idle Apprentice; The Tragical Duel, or, The Comical Rivals; Old Dame Trot and Her Comical Cat.
---	---

It has been the aim of the author to provide harmless home amusement for old and young, excluding everything objectionable to sound morality and good home-training. By Tony Denier, Pantomimist, author of "Tony Denier's Parlor Pantomimes," "Parlor Tableaux," "Amateur's Guide," etc. Price.....25 cts.

Either of the above sent by mail, on receipt of the price, by

HAPPY HOURS COMPANY, Publishers,

No. 1 Chambers Street, New York.

DARKY PLAYS.

A collection of Ethiopian Dramas, Farces, Interludes, Burlesque Operas, Eccentricities, Extravaganzas, Comicalities, Whimsicalities, etc., etc. As played by the principal "burnt-cork" performers all over the Union. In Six Parts. 16mo. Illuminated paper cover.

CONTENTS OF EACH PART.

PART I.—Deaf-In a Horn; 1 Scene. 2 Male characters.—Desdemonum; 3 Scenes. 6 Male, 1 Female character.—De Trouble Bagins at Nine; 1 Scene. 2 Male characters.—Challenge Dance; 1 Scene. 3 Male characters.—Mishaps of Cæsar Crum; 3 Scenes. 3 Male, 2 Female characters.—New Year's Calls; 5 Scenes. 5 Male, 2 Female characters.—Nobody's Son; 1 Scene. 2 Male characters.—Scipio Africanus; 3 Scenes. 3 Male, 1 Female character.—Scenes at Gurney's (Scenes in the Studio); 1 Scene. 3 Male characters.—16,000 Years Ago; 1 Scene. 3 Male characters.—Dancing Mad; 1 Scene. 6 Male, 1 Female character.

PART II.—The Coopers; 1 Scene. 6 Male, 1 Female character.—Jolly Millers; 1 Scene. 3 Male, 1 Female character.—Mischievous Nigger; 1 Scene. 4 Male, 2 Female characters.—Sham Doctor; 3 Scenes. 4 Male, 2 Female characters.—Virginia Mummy; 4 Scenes. 6 Male, 1 Female character.—Fighting for the Union; 3 Scenes. 4 Male, 2 Female characters.—Dixie; 1 Scene. 3 Male, 1 Female character.

PART III.—Ticket-Taker; 1 Scene. 5 Male characters.—Uncle Jeff; 5 Scenes. 5 Male, 2 Female characters.—Black Shoemaker; 1 Scene. 4 Male, 2 Female characters.—Rooms to Let; 1 Scene. 2 Male, 1 Female character.—Troublesome Servant; 1 Scene. 2 Male characters.—Oh, Hush! 3 Scenes. 4 Male, 1 Female character.—Quack Doctor; 1 Scene. 4 Male, 1 Female character.—Darky Tragedian; 1 Scene. 2 Male characters.

PART IV.—Three Black Smiths; 1

Scene. 3 Male characters.—Great Arrival; 1 Scene. 3 Male characters.—Les Miserables (Unhappy Pair); 1 Scene. 3 Male characters.—Hop of Fashion; 2 Scenes. 5 Male, 2 Female characters.—The Wreck; 1 Scene. 4 Male, 2 Female characters.—Dat Same Old Coon; 2 Scenes. 4 Male, 2 Female characters.—De Maid ob de Hunkpruncas; 1 Scene. 2 Male characters.—Bones at a Raffle; 2 Scenes. 3 Male characters.—An Elephant on Ice; 1 Scene. 2 Male characters.

PART V.—Magic Penny; 3 Scenes. 6 Male, 1 Female character.—Vilikens and Dinah; 1 Scene. 4 Male, 1 Female character.—Old Hunks; 1 Scene. 3 Male characters.—Highest Price for Old Clothes; 1 Scene. 3 Male characters.—Stage-Struck Darky; 1 Scene. 2 Male, 1 Female character.—Black Crook Burlesque; 2 Scenes. 7 Male, 2 Female characters.—Turkeys in Season; 2 Scenes. 3 Male characters.—Old Dad's Cabin; 1 Scene. 2 Male, 2 Female characters.—Auntie Chloe; 1 Scene. 1 Male, 1 Female character.

PART VI.—Bone Squash; 8 Scenes. 9 Male, 3 Female characters.—The Black Statue; 1 Scene. 4 Male, 2 Female characters.—Mazeppa; 2 Scenes. 7 Male, 2 Female characters.—Jack's the Lad; 6 Scenes. 7 Male, 2 Female characters.—Feast; 1 Scene. 4 Male, 2 Female characters.—The Hypochondriac; 2 Scenes. 2 Male characters.—The Actor and the Singer; 1 Scene. 4 Male characters.—Shylock; 3 Scenes. 5 Male, 2 Female characters.—Old Uncle Billy; 1 Scene. 2 Male, 1 Female character.

PRICE, EACH PART, 30 CENTS.

Sent by mail, on receipt of the price, by

HAPPY HOURS COMPANY, Publishers,

No. 1 Chambers Street, New York.

MINSTREL GAGS

And End-Men's Hand-Book.

Containing some of the best jokes and repartees of the most celebrated "burnt cork" performers of our day. Bones and Tambo in all sorts and manner of scrapes. Also, containing a rich collection of Ballads, humorous and pathetic, Ethiopian Dialogues, Sketches, Plantation Scenes, Eccentric Doings, Humorous Lectures, Laughable Interludes, Huge Africanisms, Burlesque Speeches, Mirth-provoking Witticisms, Conundrums, Yarns, Plantation Songs and Dances, etc., etc. In short, a complete Hand-Book of Burnt Cork Drollery, which will be found alike useful to the professional and amateur.

CONTENTS.

A Bird that Can't be Plucked.	From de Poiks.
Annihilating Time and Space.	Gal from Lackawanna, The.
Beautiful Isle of the Tropical Sea.	Girl at the Sewing Machine, The.
Bet, The.	"Go Work for Your Libin'."
Big Fortune, A.	Hannah Jane and Me.
Blackberrying.	How Bones Became a Minstrel.
Bones and his Little Game.	How Tambo took his Bitters.
Bones and the Monkey Tricks.	Impulsive Oration.
Bones as a Fortune Teller.	Jeallusest of Her Sect.
Bones as a Legitimate Actor.	Legal Problem, A.
Bones as a Prize Fighter.	Liberal Discount for Cash.
Bones as a "Stugent in de Expensary."	Manager in a Fix, The.
Bones as a Walkist.	Mathematics.
Bones assists at the Performance of a	Merry Life, A.
New Piece.	Momentous Question.
Bones Attends a Spiritual Seance.	Mosquitoes.
Bones gets Stuck.	Notes.
Bones in Love.	Ob Course.
Bones keeps a Boarding-House.	Pomp and Ephy Green.
Bones on George Washington.	Presidency on de Brain.
Bones on the Light Fantastic.	Proposed Increase of Taxes.
Bones Plays O'Fella.	Railroad Catastrophe.
Bones sees a Ghost.	Ring, Ring de Banjo.
Bones 'Slopes with Sukey Sly.	Rough on Tambo.
Bones tells a "Fly" Story.	School's In.
Brudder Bones as an Inkslinger.	Shakspeare with a Vengeance.
Brudder Bones in a New Character.	Simple Sum in Arithmetic.
Brudder Bones' Love Scrape.	Tambo's Traveling Agent.
Chestnut Tree, The.	The Pervisions, Josiar.
"Collud" Ball, The.	Thieves.
Conundrums.	Tonsorial.
Dancing Mad.	Toast, A.
Dat's What I'd Like to know.	Uncle Eph's Lament.
De Mudder of Invention.	Waiting to See Him Off.
Difference, The.	Way Down in Georgia 'Fo' de Wa'.
"Far Away in Alaham'."	Western Serenade.
Four-Eleven-Forty-Four.	You Bet.
Four Meetings, The.	Etc., Etc., Etc.

PRICE 30 CENTS.

Sent by mail, on receipt of the price, by

HAPPY HOURS COMPANY, Publishers,

No. 1 Chambers Street, New York.

SPEECHIANA.

An unrivaled collection of the most popular pieces of the day, embracing Pathetic, Serious and Comic Speeches and Recitations, in prose and poetry. Suitable for Anniversaries, Exhibitions, Social Gatherings and Evening Parties. It embraces French, Dutch, Irish, Yankee and Ethiopian Stories and Speeches. Very many of the Speeches and Recitations contained in this volume will be found in no other work of the kind.

CONTENTS.

Buck Fanshaw's Funeral.
Burial of Little Nell.
The Cane-bottomed Chair.
The Drummer Boy's Burial.
The Dutchman's Schmall Pox.
Ginevra.
The Goddess of Slang.
Hope and Fear.
Jim Wolf and the Cats.
Katrina Likes Me Poody Well.
Mark Twain's First Interview with Artemus Ward.
Metamora to the Council.
Miss Maloney Goes to the Dentist.
Miss Maloney on the Chinese Question.
Mr. Coville's Easy Chair.

The Naughty Little Girl.
The New Year's Sleigh Ride.
Norman Leslie's Address to the Jury.
Oh, Why should the Spirit of Mortal be Proud?
Out of the Old House.
The Professor of Signs.
Recollections of My Christmas Tree.
Schneider Sees Leah.
Shamus O'Brien.
Sheridan's Ride.
Signor Billsmith's Dancing Academy.
Tom O'Conner's Cat.
Vat You Please.
Widow Bedott to Elder Sniffles.
Etc., Etc., Etc.

PRICE 30 CENTS.

THE STUMP SPEAKER,

Being a collection of Yankee, Dutch, French, Irish and Ethiopian Stump Speeches and Recitations, Burlesque Orations, Laughable Scenes, Humorous Lectures, Button-bursting Witticisms, Ridiculous Drolleries, Funny Stories, etc., etc.

CONTENTS.

Gotlieb Klebeyer-goss on the War.
Stick a pin dere, Brudder Horace.
Paddy O'Toole's Log.
Artemus Ward's Advice to Husbands.
Burlesque Speech.
Sergeant Buzfuz in the case of Bardell vs. Pickwick.
De Milk in de Cocoanut.
Courting in French Hollow.
Or any Oder Man's Dog.
Impulsive Nigger Oration.
Crockett's Advice to Office-seekers.
A Night's Adventure.
Crystal Palace (A Nigger Lecture).
Political Stump Speech.

Patriotic Nigger Speech.
Sam Slick's Definition of a Sweetheart and a Wife.
Man, A Nigger Analysis of Natural History.
The Frenchman and the Rats.
Hans Schlackenlichter's Snake.
Ze Moskeetare.
Gotlieb Klebeyer-goss Again.
A Puzzled Dutchman.
A Dutch Cure.
Burlesque Oration on Matrimony.
Dat's So—an' more too.
Etc., Etc., Etc.

PRICE 15 CENTS.

Either of the above will be sent by mail, on receipt of the price, by

HAPPY HOURS COMPANY, Publishers,

No. 1 Chambers Street, New York.

THEATRICALS AND ELOCUTION.

The Actor's Art.

Its Requisites and how to obtain them, its Defects, and how to remove them. By CHARLES WILLIAM SMITH, Professor of Elocution in the University of Oxford, author of "Clerical Elocution," "Reading, Speaking and Action," "Common Blunders Made in Speaking and Writing," "Elocution Without a Master," etc., etc. Containing clear and full directions in every branch of the Art; with complete and valuable instructions for beginners relative to rehearsals, entrances and exits, general hints on action, qualities of voice, etc., etc. In short, an indispensable book to the amateur. Price.....15 cts.

The Amateur's Guide to Home or Drawing-Room Theatricals.

How to get them up and how to act in them. Edited by TONY DEXIER, author of "Denier's Parlor Pantomimes," "Shadow Pantomimes," "Parlor Tableaux," etc., etc. Containing full and complete instructions in every branch of the Dramatic Art. We have given special attention to the selection of pieces for private representation, also giving practical advice as to Dressing, Making Up, Properties, Stage Illusions and Effects, Deportment, Speaking and Effective Acting, Selected Scenes for Amateurs, Stage Directions, Rehearsals, Scenery and Scene Painting, Rules for Amateur Clubs, Theatrical Publications, a full list of American Theatrical Tradesmen in every Branch. The most complete book, in its variety of details, ever published. New American edition, corrected to date. Price.....25 cts.

The Art of Public Speaking.

An Exposition of the Principles of Oratory. By SAMUEL NEIL, author of "Culture and Self-Culture," "The Young Debater," etc., etc. Containing the nature and principles of Public Speaking; Ancient and Modern Eloquence; Parliamentary Eloquence; Forensic Eloquence; Eloquence of the Pulpit, etc., etc. For those who desire to become ready off-hand speakers, this book is invaluable—containing, as it does, clear directions how to arrange ideas quickly, and give them utterance with a proper regard for purity of intonation, clearness of articulation and appropriate gesture. Price.....25 cts.

Elocution Without a Master.

A Self-Instructor in the Art of Reading and Speaking well. A work for teaching not only the beginner, but for perfecting every one in this most desirable of all accomplishments. For youth this book is both interesting and valuable; and for the adult, whether professionally or socially, it is one they cannot dispense with. The accompanying instructions are so plain, direct and forcible, that the least intelligent can easily understand all the rules and precepts of the glorious art that has immortalized Calhoun, Clay, Webster, Sumner, and a legion more of the bright lights of our country. Price.....15 cts.

Hand Book of Elocution and Oratory.

Being a Systematic Compendium of the necessary Rules for attaining Proficiency in Reading and Speaking. With copious and interesting examples.

This treatise on Elocution and Oratory has been prepared with a strict regard to practical utility, by a favorite tragedienne of the stage. By attention to its rules the learner may rapidly acquire the art of reading alone with due emphasis, and of expressing himself in a set speech or a recitation with propriety. Though chiefly designed for social purposes, it will also prove a safe guide for those who wish to establish a well founded professional reputation, either as readers, speakers or actors.

CONTENTS.

Preliminary Remarks on the Leading Principles of Elocution. Family Reading. Table Oratory. Wedding Breakfast Speeches. Public Reading. After Dinner Speeches. Funeral Orations. Verse. The Bar. The Pulpit. The Stage. Parliamentary. The Lecture Desk. The Platform. Conclusion. Price.....30 cts.

Either of the above will be sent by mail, on receipt of the price, by

HAPPY HOURS COMPANY, Publishers,

No. 1 Chambers Street, New York.

them.
xford, common
" etc., h com-ces and dispen-5 cts.

atri-thor of
" etc., amatic repreeritics, elected Paint-merican variety
5 cts.

" Culnature
amen-
For
-cone them ulation
5 cts.

teachable of e; and spense
, that glorimore 5 cts.

clean-regard to its phasis, though e who speak-ading.

Dinner
Siaga.
cts.

rk.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

0 010 638 256 6